FERNALD CASE TO THE JURY

PLYMOUTH, Mass., March 18.—A jury now has the fate of Charles Fernald in its hands. He is charged with killing Joseph H. Helleur. Judge Joseph Quinn's charge was his first one in a murder case. While he spoke the prisoner listened intently. In the courtroom were his wife, his fourteen-year-old daughter Gertrude and his twelve-year-old son, Chester, and several other relatives. Judge Quinn said in part:

"The indictment in part charges the defendant with murder in the second degree. You are not to take into consideration the grand jury indictment, so dismiss it at once from your minds and take into consideration only the facts presented in this court. Because the consequences of this case is great you should be slow in your deliberations.

"Malice Must Be Proved.

"This defendant cannot be convicted until every essential feature of the charge is proven by the government beyond a reasonable doubt. To be beyond a reasonable doubt means that it must be a certainty.

"Murder in the second degree is the killing of a human being with malice, but with no deliberation. Malice is either expressed or implied. It is for you to say whether a cue, if used as the government alleges, was a deadly weapon or not. You must take into consideration all the testimony and weigh it all fairly.

"It is contended on the part of the defence that Fernald did not go out of his pool room and strike Helleur. The defendant was under no compulsion to take the stand. You should weigh all this evidence carefully. If you conclude that the wound was inflicted by the defendant the government must go farther and prove that the wound was a cause of Helleur's death. If it has been proven to you that Helleur died from some other cause, then the defendant should be acquitted in so far as that phase of the case is concerned, namely, that he could not be convicted of guilt of murder in the second degree or of manslaughter.

Facts Jury's to Determine

"I have no view of the facts in this case. You shall not take into consideration anything I say about the facts. You have a right to find the defendant guilty of assault in case you find Fernald did strike Helleur, but that death did not result from the blow and that the blow did not contribute to his deah.

"If you find that the defendant did not strike the blow as the government alleges, he should be acquitted."

Judge Quinn advised the jury not to call for the skull of Helleur for inspection in the jury room unless they deemed it absolutely necessary. Helleur was buried on March 19, 1910, and his body was not disintered until last Sunday.

Before the jury retired there was brief consultation between District Attorney Barker and Attorneys James M. Morton, Jr., and H. H. Baker, counsel for the defence.

MAYOR TO ADDRESS RAILROAD CLERKS

Collins, president of the City Council, have accepted the invitation extended them by the Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks to address the 2,000 members of that organization expected to be present at the mass meeting at Faneuil Hall to-morrow afternoon. This will be the first meeting ever held in New England to concentrate the efforts of the clerks of all New England railroads.

ICE STORMS CAUSE SHORTAGE OF GRANITE

BARRE, Vt., March 18.—The many ice storms of this Winter have seriously interfered with the granite industry in Vermont, according to owners of quarries here. They say that not for ten years past have conditions been so unfavorable to their business as during the past few months. As a result there is a shortage of rough stock, and an accumulation of unfilled orders.

GIRL RESCUED FROM CAPTOR

LOWELL, March 18.—Attracted by the screams of a young girl, the police have uncovered what they say is one of the worst cases of white slavery brought to light in this city. The girl, Angela Tellis, seventeen and very pretty, was arraigned in police court to-day and held in $500 for a hearing on Monday. Costas Kanalaris was held in $700 on the same charge and also on one of larceny. The police say they will prefer a more serious complaint against him.

The girl is Greek and cannot speak English. Her story as told through an interpreter is that she came to Lowell from Woonsocket last Monday in search of a relative. She says she stopped a policeman near the railroad station, but he was unable to understand her. Costas was passing and the policeman called him over. Costas, the girl charges, said he would take the girl to her relatives. Instead, she was taken to Haverhill and Lawrence as a prisoner. When she refused to give him money she says he threatened her. Her screams brought the police. The man was captured in a restaurant.

TRAVELING MEN WANT NEW MILEAGE BOOK

WORCESTER, March 18.—The traveling salesmen of this city have petitioned the New Haven railroad for a new mileage book to be valid on all the company's lines. Secretary E. Webster of the U. C. T. says every one of his 556 member will sign the petition. Now that the Boston & Maine is controlled by the New Haven, it is believed such a book will be good on every railway in the New England States, as the Mellen system will be able to interchange with the other New England lines if it desires to do so. The issue of such a book will mean a saving in time and convenience to busy traveling men.

SECURITY SALESMAN HELD FOR FORGERY

John F. Polson, 28, salesman for a security house, was arrested early to-day at his home, No. 2 Westmoreland street, Dorchester, on a secret indictment warrant charging him with forging and uttering nine checks for a total of $325. The checks were drawn on the National Shawmut Bank and the Bay State, Old Colony and American Trust Companies. The complaint was made by Harrison B. Payne of No. 738 Broadway, South Boston, and the arrest was made by inspector Gleavey of Police Headquarters and Patrolman Hunter of the Dorchester station.

WELLESLEY WARDEN DEFIES CRITICS

"It's nobody's business what time I get to work, and if they don't like the way I do my business it is time, now, at the annual town meeting, to say so," declared Fletcher M. Abbott, the wealthy tree warden of Wellesley, in a letter which has been made public.

"People say I don't get to work until 9 o'clock. It is no one's business. They claim I hire expensive labor. That is false. If the persons making these charges will fight, they will get all they want."

BIG COMB PLANT TO START AGAIN

LEOMINSTER, March 18.—After being idle almost a year, the Williams & Winn comb factory will begin turning out combs again early next month. The shop employs 200. Change in fashions led to the closing of the plant and the idleness of the past year.

JORDAN AND HARVEY SPEAK IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, March 18.—Michael J. Jordan of the Boston Bar and Colonel George B. M. Harvey, the New York editor, were the principal speakers at the St. Patrick's Day banquet held in this city by the Hibernian Society.

LODGE GUIDES NAHANT VOTERS

After being elected moderator by acclamation for the fourth successive time at Nahant town meeting to-day, Senator Lodge seized the opportunity to tell his fellow townsmen not only how gratified he was at being returned to Washington at the last Senatorial election, but also how particularly touched he was at the manifestation of friendship in his own town.

Mr. Lodge arrived at the old town hall in Nahant at 10:42 in a closed carriage, accompanied by his son, John Lodge. He was warmly greeted by the seventy-five voters.

C. D. Vary nominated Mr. Lodge for moderator by acclamation. When the unanimous shout for him died away the Senator said:

Glad He's There.

"I need hardly give you any assurance of the pleasure it is to preside over your annual town meeting. I came from Washington for that purpose, and I always regard it as a great honor and privilege.

"But this year I cannot let the occasion pass without saying a word regarding a matter not immediately connected with our town. I have been selected within the last three months for the fourth time as a United States Senator from Massachusetts. It is difficult for me to express my gratitude to the people of Massachusetts and their Representatives in the Legislature for having again bestowed upon me such a signal mark for their confidence.

Grateful for Return.

"There were many incidents in connection with that election and the support I received that meant a great deal to me. But nothing so touched my heart as the manifestation of feeling in my own town of Nahant. I have never ceased to think of it and I will never forget it.

"I have lived here all my life. I know you all. I knew the grandfathers of some of you, the fathers of many and all of you to-day. I have gone in and out among you year after year, sharing in all that concerns the town.

"You were pleased to say, when the election came out, in your opinion—and you know me better than any people in the Commonwealth—that honor was well deserved.

"I am deeply grateful. I will never forget it. I could not let this occasion pass for telling you how much it touched me."

Insurgents There Too.

The dismal weather prevented a big attendance, but the fight over the site for a new town hall was too keen to keep the leaders in town affairs from the meeting.

A committee which was previously appointed by Senator Lodge to select a site favored a location on the west side of the library. Others, called the "insurgents," came to the hall to oppose this. They said the hall should be placed just north of the Methodist Church.

D. B. Finnerty, leader of the insurgents, arrived at the hall at 11:05, just as the applause for Senator Lodge's speech was subsiding.

The cow was received from the Chicago stock yards, and its record size opened the eyes of the oldest marketmen.

WOMEN TRAPPED BY FIRE

Two women and two children were burned to death in a fire at No. 12 Truro street, South End, early to-day. A score of people had narrow escapes.

The police say the place, which was known as the Hotel Truro, a four-story apartment house, was a fire trap. According to the officials there were no fire escapes on the building and the dumb waiter shaft, which ran up through the house near the stairways, was a menace to the lives of the occupants.

Mrs. Rosaline M. Wharton, thirty-two, and her thirteen-year-old daughter, Enola, were found dead in a room on the fourth floor but a short distance from the stairs. Mother and child were folded in each other's arms and had evidently been calling for assistance at the window of the room when they succumbed and were burned to death. Both bodies were badly charred.

In an adjoining room Mrs. Mary Kelly, thirty, was found suffocated. She had stopped to dress herself and her escape was cut off. Her eighteen-months-old daughter also had been suffocated.

Driven Over Roof.

The bodies were viewed by Medical Examiners Leary and Magrath, after which they were taken down ladders and sent to the City Hospital morgue, where autopsies will be performed to-day. The four dead persons as well as the other occupants in the house were colored.

Scenes of the wildest disorder followed the discovery of the blaze as the panic-stricken occupants of the building groped their way through the smoke down stairs to the street or over the roof to the adjoining building. The fire, starting at the base of the dumb waiter shaft in the basement of the building, burned away the gas meter. A gas explosion which shook the whole building and blew out the windows followed, and the flames shot up the shaft, through the roof.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ziegler fled from the top floor to the roof. Charles Warton, carrying his eleven-year-old son, Clifton, groped his way down the stairs to the street. He had shouted to his wife to follow him with Enola, and it was not until he reached the street that he realized their escape had been cut off by the flames and that they, with Mrs. Kelley and her infant, had been imprisoned on the top floor. Henry Basett, a lodger, who was sleeping in a room near the stairs, managed to gain the roof and was hauled out of danger by the firemen.

Women Flee Down Stairs.

Miss Cora Eaton, Mrs. Cora Lee Bullock Robert Stewart and wife, Mrs. Esther Munlin and son, Carl, four, and Alice Hardy and her baby niece, Marion Provost, who were on the third floor, fled down the burning stairs and all reached the street in safety. Mr. and Mrs. John Caldwell and several lodgers made their escape from the second floor, and Mrs. Priscilla Johnson, who conducted a restaurant on the first floor, was awakened by the gas explosion and hurried out of the building.

Within a few minutes after the discovery of the fire the interior of the building was a mass of flames. Three alarms were sounded in rapid succession. Ladders were raised as soon as the firemen arrived, and efforts were made to reach those imprisoned on the top floor, but it was too late.

The bodies of the four victims were identified by the process of elimination, and it was not until they had arrived at the morgue that the identifications were made positive. Mrs. Kelly, with her infant, was visiting her sister, Mrs. Zeigler. Her husband is said to be in Halifax, N. S.

KITTY GORDON FREED, TO WED COUNT FRIES

NEW YORK, March 18.—Wall street, Broadway and Fifth avenue are interested in the news from London that Miss Kitty Gordon, the actress, Mrs. Beresford in private life, has obtained her divorce from the brother of Lord Decies, who recently married Vivien Gould. On the same day the divorce was granted the actress announced her engagement to Count Maurice Fries of Austria, who recently has been prominent in the London and New York stock markets. The Count is young, handsome and wealthy. The wedding will take place in June.

MRS. SCHENK'S TRIAL AGAIN POSTPONED

WHEELING, W. Va., March 18.—Dressed in a natty Spring suit of lavender color, Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenck appeared in the Criminal Court this morning for her second trial on the charge of attempting to poison her husband, a millionaire packer. Attorneys for the defense moved for postponement of the trial until the May term and this was granted. Mrs. Schenk was required to sign a $10,000 bond, her own recognizance being accepted.

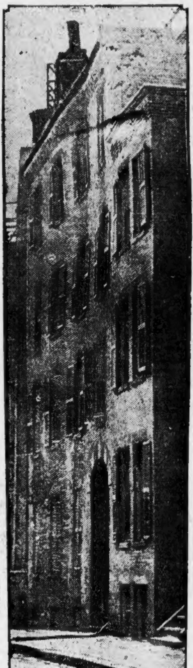
MORE TIME TO GET SAFETY APPLIANCES

WASHINGTON, March 18.The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day extended the time allowed railroads to equip cars and locomotives with saftey appliances, in accordance with the regulation recently defined by the commission. Three years are given the roads to equip passenger cars, five years, in which to equip freight cars, one year for switching locomotives and two years for other locomotives.

ONE DEAD IN EXPLOSION.

BALTIMORE, March 18.—One man is dead and several others injured as the result of an explosion which wrecked the fertilizer plant of the D. D. Martin Company at the Union abattoir.

TRURO STREET HOUSE, SCENE OF FIRE TRAGEDY



TOBIN FORBIDS GENERAL STRIKE

NEW YORK, March 18.—A general strike of teamsters in sympathy with the express drivers and helpers has been forbidden by D. J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. William Haselton, general organizer of the brotherhood, to-day received the following dispatch from President Tobin, who is in Indianapolis:

"International organization will not indorse a general strike under any circumstances. Local unions having contracts with employers must respect these contracts. In a conference of the executive board of the local unions I instruct you to decide against a general strike or sympathetic strike for any reason. The history of sympathetic strikes has demonstrated that they have always been failures."

Mr. Haselton immediately answered that no general sympathetic strike would be called. This action is expected to avert the great labor struggle that has been planned in New York by union leaders for several days.

Samuel Gompers was to-day summoned to New York by William Ashton, general organizer of the Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Mayor Gaynor is not in sympathy with the present strike, and frankly says so, which precludes the possibility of his being selected as a mediator.

Five hundred police were drafted to-day to the police stations about Fifty-first street, which has been a storm centre, due to the fact that the stables of express companies are located near there. Shots were fired and the strikers are daily becoming bolder in their attacks upon wagons owned by express companies.

125 CO-EDS PROTEST MEN'S GARTER SIGNS

CHICAGO, March 18.—Is the printing of a cigarette advertisement in the Daily Northwestern demoralizing to male students of the university? If so, is the printing of a picture of a man's bare leg incased in a patented garter equally demoralizing to the girl students? Yes, is the emphatic answer to this latter question by 200 signers of a petition recently circulated. Both questions are being discussed by the student body of Northwestern University at Evanston. One hundred and twenty-five girls signed the second petition.

1 DEAD IN $100,000 STOCKYARDS FIRE

CHICAGO, March 18.—One man was killed and $100,000 damage done by fire in the Union stock yards early to-day. Six hundred cattle were burned to death. Another man, Jacob F. Ryan, a watchman, employed in the yards, is missing.

12,000 MEN JOIN FORCES IN FAR EAST

WASHINGTON, March 18.—It became known here to-day that within three months the garrisons in the United States Far East possessions will be reinforced by 12,000 infantry, cavalry and artillery. The Second United States Infantry, commanded by Colonel Mansfield, which was supposed to be en route for San Antonio, has secretly proceeded to San Francisco, whence it will embark for Honolulu.

TO REINFORCE GARRISON.

This regiment is not going to relieve other troops, but as an addition to the garrison already in the Hawaiian Islands. The great force it is contemplated to put in the Far East will be divided between the Hawaiian Island and the Philippines.

United States Consul Deering at Mexico City to-day telegraphed the State Department that the constitutional guarantees were suspended throughout Mexico yesterday.

The news form London that Japan is striving to renew her treaty of offensive and defensive alliance with Great Britain, although the compact with that country does not expire until 1915—four years hence—has caused much significant discussion in diplomatic circles here.

May Attack Canal.

This followed a great deal of talk over the interview cabled from Berlin to the AMERICAN with Count Reventlow, the German naval expert, in which he declared that Japan is preparing for aggressive war against the United States, just as she some years ago prepared to make war against Russia.

Students in statesmanship see in Japan's efforts to tie up England with another compact designs on the United States.

The Panama Canal, the keystone in the arch of America's fabric of defence on the Pacific Coast, will not be completed until 1915. The present treaty expires that year. With the canal in effect the United States would be practically invincible upon the western coast, owing to the possibility of fleet movements from one coast to another. While the United States could send her warships through the canal a hostile power would have to take the longer course around the Horn.

Japan's Plans Slip Out.

The negotiations of Japan were inadvertently betrayed by Carlyon Wilfroy Bellairs, M. P., vice-chairman of the British Naval League, in the course of a lecture on war courses in the Royal Naval College.

It is believed powerful pressure has been exerted to prevent a renewal of the alliance. The "international peace" addresses of Foreign Minister Grey in Parliament at this time are believed to have a further effect in view than a temporary discussion of the naval appropriation clause in the budget.

Through the fact that the Foreign Office could renew the treaty without referring the matter to Parliament, an attempt will be made to interpellate the government upon the subject on the ground that the matter is one of too much importance to the world's peace to be handled in camera.

Although time and again it has been expressed in recent years that the sympathies of Great Britain are with the United States, this treaty has for its terms the compulsion of England to aid Japan in the event of war with a foreign power.

Roosevelt Sees Japan's Menace.

Information was received in Washington to-day that Colonel Roosevelt, while in Albuquerque, New Mexico, recently admitted to friends that the Japanese men-

SAUERKRAUT HIS LONG LIFE RECIPE

CINCINNATI, March 18.—Rev. Earl Flynn of Berkeley, Cal., told a Y. M. C. A. audience to-night in an address on long life and health: "The food which contains the longevity germ is sauerkraut. The man or woman who keeps himself on a diet of this kind, barring any unusual ills, ought to live a century or even more. Sauerkraut is very nutritious and should be on the table of everybody who longs for a long and happy life." Though seventy-five years old, Mr. Flynn is hale and looks much younger.

WOMAN TRIES TO END LIFE BY LONG LEAP

Believing herself pursued by some unseen enemy, Mrs. Catherine McGurn early to-day broke from her husband's grasp and jumped from a window of her home at No. 84 West Springfield street, to the ground, a distance of fifteen feet, and escaped unhurt. She was found on the sidewalk and taken to the City Hospital, where she is being held for observation. It is thought her mind has been temporarily deranged.

WAR SCARE IN GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, March 18.—All officers of the British army who are on furlough have been ordered to return to their commands at once. No explanation of this action was made by the War Department to-day.

The mobilization of American troops in Texas has caused widespread discussion here, and the news that the English army is to be put in fighting trim has increased this. Several of the officers are now in the United States.

MAN IN STUPOR SAVED AT FIRE

While making their rounds at 2 a. m. to-day Sergeant William N. McMenimon and Patrolmen Edward Gordon of Station No. 3 saw smoke and flames coming from a vacant house at Short and Bridge streets, East Cambridge. The front door was broken down and the policemen found Daniel Leonard, twenty, of No. 56 Henley street, Charlestown, on the floor unconscious.

The flames were burning his clothing, but before he was seriously burned the two policemen rescued him. He was hurried to the police station, where a charge of intoxication was placed against him. It is thought he may have thrown a lighted match on the floor.

SIGNALMEN DODGE DEATH IN WRECK

WARREN, March 18.—Two railroad signalmen, E. A. Manning and Howard H. Young of East Brookfield are wondering to-day how they managed to escape with their lives when their handcar was struck by a locomotive on the Boston & Albany, near the Sayles & Jenks woolen mill. Caught on a curve, the men jumped while the coming engine was but twenty feet away. The wreckage of the handcar was strewn along the track for 300 yards, while one of the wheels was hurled into the Quaboag River.

POLICE ARREST THIS DETECTIVE

FITCHBURG, March 18.—James Matis is a greater detective than Sherlock Holmes. He has not only cleared up several mysteries for the local police, but has finally landed himself in the hands of the law. His detective glory put the police on his own trail.

Matis came here from New Bedford a few months ago and opened a restaurant at No. 457 Main street. This was merely preliminary to making himself a regular police detective. He practised "detecting" in his off time.

One of his first feats was to locate a married woman who had left her husband. He traced her to another city and effected a reconciliation between the pair.

When the police became "stuck" on an abandoned case Matis came to their rescue. As a result a man and woman were trailed, arrested and sent to jail.

Matis' fame as a detective became known far and wide. It spread to New Bedford, with the disconcerting result that the police of that city sent here for him as a fugitive from justice. He is wanted there in connection with a liquor nuisance case for which he has been held for the higher court.

GRATITUDE OF HUNDREDS FORCES ME TO REPEAT MY OFFER

Made in the Boston American of March 4.

I said then: "I am going to Give Away a Free Trial Treatment for Deafness to every Sufferer who asks for it." I have been greatly moved by the gratitude of readers who, by the hundreds, have come into my office and poured in letters of request; also many letters of grateful thanks have been received. From all parts of the country people whom I have cured of that terrible affliction, Deafness, are thanking me.

A letter from Boston says: "Allow me to thank you a thousand times for the good hearing you have restored to me." One from Detroit says: "You have cured me of Deafness. I bless the day I saw your offer."

These grateful letters, from so many different sources, have touched me deeply, and so I again make the offer to the readers of the Boston American: "I will give away a free trial treatment for Deafness to every sufferer who calls at my office, or writes for it."

Of course, this offer is open only for a short time. If you are deaf or have any trouble with your ears, come or write for free treatment. This treatment is entirely Free. I know what you suffer in the approach of Deafness and the intolerable agony of complete Deafness, and I want to help you. I have cured many people of Deafness and I want you to have the opportunity to hear again. Write me either post card or letter, requesting this free treatment. If you have the slightest doubt about something being wrong with your ears, be on the safe side and send for trial treatment. It does not cost you anything. If you are growing deaf and are tired of experimenting, profit by the example of those who have been cured by my treatment. Many of these people believed they could never be cured. They had tried many different things which did them no good. MY treatment restored their hearing. Send to Dr. Edward Gardner, Suite 463, 38 West 33d St., New York City, and get Free Treatment.

CONTEST EDITOR AT NEW ADDRESS

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

The Contest Editor has moved. The address of the Contest Department is No. 275 Devonshire street, Boston. Forget the old address, No. 272. Remember the new one, 275.

Of course, this moving doesn't affect the postoffice number of the Contest Department. That remains P. O. Box 227, Boston, just the same. All mail is to be addressed thus. But all goods to be brought to the Contest Editor should come to No. 275 Devonshire street now. And that is where you can find him if you have time to call.

You know the old saying: "Three moves equal one fire." Well, that's not so far out of the way as it might be. Imagine moving the whole Contest Department. We all came over across the street. Contest Editor, his assistants, a whole flock of stenographer girls, books, records, furniture and all—even to the office cat, if there was any, but there isn't.

Moved St. Patrick's Day.

Moving came on St. Patrick's Day. Also on Evacuation Day. Likewise on a Friday, most appropriately. But the work of the contest department was not stopped. It was merely interrupted a bit, as it were. Those lists of candidates' standing in Districts Three, Four, Five, Six and Seven had to be gotten out for to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN. There was no time to lose. Why, the forty-'leven stenographer girls didn't even have time to quarrel among themselves for best locations in the new quarters. They had to hop to their work on those lists so as to keep up with the game.

We like our new quarters pretty well, thank you. They are right opposite the old location. Drop in and see us when you are in town. Have a little talk with the Contest Editor about your contest campaign. Maybe you'll pick up a point or two.

And, in the meantime, don't forget that to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN is most important to every candidate and his friends. The candidates' standing by districts in districts Three, Four, Five, Six and Seven will be given on a big, full-page announcement. In addition, there will be the usual daily talk by the Contest Editor to his candidates.

Remember, too, that the Sunday AMERICAN coupon counts for ten votes. If you have 100 friends hustling for you and each one clips one of those Sunday coupons for you, it makes a total of 1,000 votes right there.

Special March Offer.

But better than Sunday coupons is the special double March offer, which is one of the greatest vote-getters ever extended to candidates in a contest of this nature.

For each and every lot of ten subscriptions sent in by any candidate during March that candidate gets a special vote bonus of 5,000 votes, in addition to the regular vote credit which goes with each separate subscription.

A candidate who turns in ten one-year subscriptions, for instance, gets a regular vote credit which goes with each separate subscription.

A candidate who turns in ten one-year subscriptions, for instance, gets a regular credit of 1,500 votes on each subscription, or 15,000 on all ten subscriptions. Then the candidate gets, in addition, a special vote bonus of 5,000 votes for turning in a lot of ten subscriptions. This brings the total up to 20,000 votes on that one delivery.

Candidates can see how the vote credit will mount up under this process if any kind of energy is shown.

There is a second feature to the double March offer. There is a prize of a splendid 1911 automobile runabout to be awarded the candidate polling the highest vote by subscription during March.

March has only thirteen more days to go. Less than two weeks remain for the special March offer, with its big bonus vote feature.

Hustle is the word for all candidates, especially in March.

A little now and then, with a searching and cleansing yet gentle cathartic, to remove offending matter from the stomach and bowels, to tone up and invigorate the liver and quicken its tardy action, and you thereby avoid a multitude of diseases.

Of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequalled. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate. Hence their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and their attendant discomforts.

NEPHEW GETS VOTES MEANT FOR UNCLE

Some members of the Board of Assessors were given a surprise when they found out that instead of Christopher P. McCaffrey, the Ward 7 Democratic leader, his nephew, Christopher J., of No. 71 Oak street, was given the appointment as second assistant assessor. Several members in voting on the name of McCaffrey for the vacancy in the Ward 7 list supposed they were voting for Christopher P., the undertaker, who has been the leader of the Fitzgerald forces in the ward. It was discovered, however, that it was a nephew of the undertaker who got the berth. The original Christopher is still on the list of eligibles.

NORMAN WHITE ATTACKS FOSS

Norman H. White, contestant with Speaker "Joe" Walker for the Republican nomination for Governor, addressing the members of the Gardner Boat Club attacked Governor Foss and Speaker Walker. Representative White was talking State finances, and while he refrained from mentioning the Governor or the Speaker by name, his allusions were plain.

"They are either ignorant or demagogues. They ought to study arithmetic. They're trying to obtain popularity on false issues," he said.

"The finances of the State are in the best condition. Our institutions are managed by the ablest men in the world," were some of the other bouquets of the evening handed out to his political opponents by Representative White.

$1,000 LEGACY TO OLD HOUSEKEEPER

The will of Mrs. Martha G. Burgess, filed in the Dedham Probate Court, makes the following public bequests: $1,000 to each of the Women's Board of Missions, the American Board for Foreign Missions, the Congregational Home Mission of New York, and the Dedham Asylum for Discharged Female Prisoners. $2,000 is left to the Allin Evangelical Society, Dedham; $500 to the Dedham Historical Society, and to Katie Slattery, a house servant long in the employ of Mrs. Burgess, the sum of $1,000. Prior bequests totalling about $15,000 were revoked by codicil.

114 VETERANS TO BE RETIRED

Hundreds of veteran employes of the city, are to be retired and younger men put in their places under the recently enacted legislative act. Retirement is compulsory under the statute which applies only to Civil War veterans and provides that those who have been in the service of the city for ten years or more and became physically incapacitated for duty are to be placed on the retired list at half pay.

Commissioner of Public Works Rourke is the first department head to take advantage of the law. He has submitted to the Mayor a list of 114 employes of his department whom he recommends should be compelled to undergo a physical examination with a view to retiring at once all those found incapacitated for duty.

The salaries of the men included, amount to $104,000. If all are retired, it will necessitate an outlay of $52,000 a year for pensions. Commissioner Rourke, however, plans to only hire half as many new men in the places of those retired. He believes that even with half as many younger and stronger men the efficiency of his department will be materially increased.

Of the list submitted, Charles H. Godbold, a tollman in the ferry service, is the oldest in point of service, he having worked for the city forty years.

Of those on the list political interest centres about Horace Sias, an inspector of the highway division. He is the first man on the list of Civil War eligibles for appointment as yard foreman. His position on the list has greatly troubled some of the higher officials of the city's service because of the fact that he is a veteran and cannot be passed over by them. One appointment has been held up for several months on this account.

SMITH BLAMES MUNSTERBERG

ALTIMORE, Md., March 18.—Profes- Hugo Munsterberg, the Harvard psycho- st, threatened to cable a protest to sident Taft last January if Professor rles Alphonse Smith of the University Virginia and his wife were invited to Schleppencour or Imperial Court recep- at Berlin on January 18. Professor th, who has just arrived home, declares bassador Hill, explaining the reason y the Smiths were not guests at the re- ption, told him:

"The sole cause of the trouble has been r. Munsterberg. I went to the proper ourt officials, who assured me that the Roosevelt professor and his wife would be welcomed at the Schleppencour. Just about his time, however, Professor Munsterberg alled at the embassy and learning that you were to be presented, sprang up in great excitement, saying: 'It shall not be, it shall not be, I will cable to President Taft.'"

"Professor Munsterberg's action needs no comment," said Professor Smith. "Ever since our inaugural addresses I had felt that while professing publicly the warmest friendship for me, he was omitting no opportunity to strike in the dark.

"'Should this affair be made public,' Mr. Hill has said more than once, 'Professor Munsterberg would probably deny the whole story and thus there would be forced upon me the unpleasantness of having the question of veracity raised between us.' I assured him that I did not think the country would hesitate long on the issue. Then again he added: 'It might bring up the whole question of North and South again.'

"This statement one finds it hard to treat with patience. Mr. Hill ought to know that when it comes to the maintenance of an American's rights or privileges against the sinister machinations of a foreign subject when the question is one of common courtesy to a man or woman, when the dignity and inviolability of the American Embassy itself are at stake, there is no North, South, East or West. There is only one common and united country.

"Had Mr. Hill told me that Professor Munsterberg could not be presented and that on this account I had better waive the privilege of the Roosevelt professor, I should have done so instantly. It should be said also that the importance of the Schleppencour as a Court function does not enter into the question. It merely revealed the attitude of Professor Munsterberg to an American citizen who was eligible to a privilege to which he as a German citizen was not eligible."

BAR DANCING IN BROCKTON SCHOOL

BROCKTON, March 18.—Teachers at the Huntington School will no longer instruct the pupils in folk dances, as parents of some of the younger ones have entered a protest with Superintendent of Schools George L. Farley. The dancing was suggested by Principal John I. Rackliffe of the school in the belief, he says, that the dances would take the form of calisthenics and be more pleasing to the children.

SAMUEL NORRIS WEDS COUNTESS

NEWPORT, R. I., March 18.—Countess Margot von Beroldingen was married here to-day to Samuel Norris, secretary of the Rubber Trust. The wedding was a quite simple one at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Joseph F. Stone, on Bellevue avenue. The Rev. George Locke of St. Michael's Church of Bristol performed the ceremony. There were no attendants. A small bridal breakfast followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Norris will live in New York. The Countess will drop her title forever from now and be known simply as Mrs. Norris.

The marriage to-day brings to public notice once more the unhappy experience to-day's bride underwent in her first marriage. As the daughter of Joseph F. Stone, the banker, she occupied a splendid social position in New York. She fell in love with Count Alexander von Beroldingen, a voluntary exile from Austria, who was earning his own way in America. He had been an officer in an Austrian regiment and some prank made it necessary, he thought, to leave the country.

The Count and his bride seemed to be very happy in this country. He made no boast of his title and did not want to be known by it. He worked hard for an express company and won promotion and earned a good living. The Count did not seem to care for his wife's money, and the whole affair seemed a real romance out of the story books.

The death of a relative recalled the Count and his wife to Austria, where he became wealthy in his own right and entered upon the life of an Austrian nobleman. Three years ago the Countess returned mysteriously to America with her little daughter. It became known that the couple were later divorced. The Countess or her mother would never discuss her life abroad with the Count, and the incident is shrouded in mystery.

Samuel Norris, the groom to-day, is a wealthy business man with large interests. He graduated from Harvard in 1883. He lives in New York, but spends much time in Bristol, near the works of the rubber companies in which he is an officer and director.

Governor Foss received fifty members of the New Century Club of Malden, an organization of women, at the executive chambers in the State House. President Treadway also made a little speech of appreciation when the women visited the Senate.

CAPE COD HERRING SURE SIGN OF SPRING

BUZZARDS BAY, March 18.—Cape Cod herring, alewives as they are called, have made their appearance, and springtime has surely arrived, according to the belief of the fishermen along the coast. Two barrels of these fish have been caught at Edgartown and sold in the market for food, and they brought, as they always do at this time of the year, fancy prices.

CHINA YIELDS ALL TO RUSSIAN DEMANDS

To Develop the Bust

Can you tell me any harmless way to increase the bust. I do not want any more flesh on the hips or other parts of my body, but I am so flat-chested I would try anything you thought would give me even two or three inches more development. ETHEL W.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped busts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among her own sex and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send 10c. to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 89 C. A., Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development of the bust, and will give a full, beautiful form without any one knowing that this treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned the breasts became flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr. Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms, as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary flesh builders or tonics, as they increase the hips and limbs, and with the present styles the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

I WAS A Heavy Drinker

Consumed quart of whiskey every 24 hours.

CURED IN 3 DAYS

If you know anyone who drinks alcohol in any form, regularly or periodically, let me send my FREE book, "Confessions of an Alcohol Slave."

I drank beer at first, then gradually developed into a drinker of strong liquors. When drinking heavily I couldn't hesitate to pawn my coat or break a saloon window to get spirits. For long periods I would drink over a quart of whiskey, rum or gin daily. And some mixed drinks and beer additionally!

I damaged business, health & social opportunities, made family miserable, lost real friends; became an unworthy, unwelcome burden upon all except the saloonkeepers, who cheerfully took my money for the vile poison.

For 16 years I kept it up, & I was regarded as a hopeless case. Various "cures" did me no good. But now I have a joyful message for drinkers &

Mothers, Wives, Sisters

While drifting from bad to worse, as all slaves of King Alcohol do, I unexpectedly found a true cure. It was (& is) genuine. Saved my life. My health was quickly restored. I became a respectable man, enjoying every benefit of freedom from accursed alcohol. I speedily & naturally lost all desire for drink. I took less & less. I began to prefer tea, coffee & other non-alcoholic liquids; the craving for liquor ceased, I could sleep perfectly, my stomach became well & I recovered from other ailments which I now know were due to strong drink.

WONDERFUL

My cure lasted 3 days; if I had relied upon will power or faith I would still be a drunkard, because an alcohol slave has no will power while drinking. I rejoiced so greatly at having found a true cure that I decided to devote my life to removing the curse from others. My success has been marvelous. During eight years I have personally attended to over 6000 men and women who were addicted to drink; the list includes very many persons notable in all walks of life, including those of brains and those of physical energy. If I were permitted to mention names of those who have been saved through this quick, permanent cure the public would be astonished. They include senators, congressmen, public officials, great lawyers, bankers, clergymen, noted merchants, skilled mechanics, trusted managers & clerks, farmers & others in all vocations.

I tell about the secret in my book, which I send FREE to every person (or relative or friend) who takes alcohol in any form to excess. My one purpose in life is to cure the drunkard. I rejoice in every cure, each victim has my sympathy. What I promise is absolutely guaranteed. My remedy is for either steady or periodical drinkers. Think of it—a complete and permanent home cure between Friday night and Monday night—or any other 72 hours! Men or Women, Any Age, Quickly Cured.

To relatives, friends or employers I say—if you want to cure a drinker in the quickest time & permanently with or without his knowledge & with absolute safety, read my book: changes despair to joy.

ABSOLUTELY FREE

I will send you my book, in plain wrapper, promptly, postpaid. It tells of my own career & the wonderful discovery and gives valuable advice. No other book like it. I especially appeal to those who had wasted money on treatments or remedies which have no lasting effect. Remember, it costs nothing & you will always be glad that you wrote. NEW LIGHT ON JAPANESE PLANS ace on the western coast of Mexico is serious and he is said to have told his old Rough Rider friends that in the event of war he would ask the President's permission to organize a division and recruit it in the southwest.

Roosevelt had just come from El Paso, where it is said he was startled by inside information concerning Japanese activity. The whole west coast, he was told, is lined with subjects of the Mikado, and it was declared to him that the only reason for the army and navy mobilizing was that the State Department had been informed of a league between Diaz and the Japanese by which the latter, in exchange for coaling stations, would aid in suppressing the revolution.

General Miles Sounds Warning.

A warning of the weakness of the American possessions in the Pacific ocean was sounded to-day by General Nelson A. Miles, formerly commander-in-chief of the United States army. It found an immediate echo in official circles to-day and added to the tremendous discussion that has been going on ever since President Taft ordered 20,000 men to hurry to the Mexican frontier.

Although General Miles believes that war between Japan and the United States is unlikely, he is of the opinion that if it came, Japan could seize the possessions of the United States in the Pacific. Though General Miles believes that America could put an army of one million perfectly equipped men in the field in the event of war, experts upon such far-embracing questions asserted that the strategic value given the United States by the completion of the Panama Canal far outdistances this preparedness in the importance of defensive operations.

Would Annihilate Japs.

With the Panama canal completed this country could concentrate her entire navy upon either coast upon short notice, while a hostile nation would be handicapped. General Miles thinks that a war between Japan and the United States would result in the complete annihilation of the Mikado's Empire, because of America's unlimited resources. America is fitted to carry on war for a period of unlimited duration, whereas Japan could be bankrupted within two years' fighting, he asserts.

President Taft expects that Congress will remain in session until well into the Summer months. This is made evident by the fact that the White House cold air plant to-day is being put in readiness.

Discussing the Japanese question from the English view point, Lieutenant Belaires said in London: "Japan undoubtedly means to obtain supremacy in the Pacific Ocean. Although Count Von Reventlow talks from the naval point of view, there is a very strong weapon which both Great Britain and the United States possess as against Japan, and that is finance.

"It is open to England and the United States at any moment to withdraw financial support, but so far as we can gather from the history of nations, finance is seldom patriotic. If finance would only be patriotic, undoubtedly Japan would be crippled and prevented from going to war in the Pacific.

"It is certain that the whole sympathies of Great Britain are on the side of the United States, and at the same time the terms of our alliance compel Great Britain to go to the assistance of Japan if Japan is attacked.

MILES SAYS U. S. WOULD ANNIHILATE JAPAN IN BATTLE

WASHINGTON, March 18. — Japan might easily seize the Pacific island possessions of the United States by a quick dash and hold them for a time, but that would be the limit of her successes in the event of a war.

This is the belief of General Nelson A. Miles, formerly Lieutenant-General of the United States army. Discussing the prediction of war between the United States and Japan by Count von Reventlow, the German strategist, General Miles said:

"Japan could seize our Pacific islands. The Philippines, Hawaii and Guam, in their present condition are a source of weakness to us. But the instant they were seized war would begin. Its character can be judged best by the mettle shown by the yellow men seven or eight years ago and what we know the American soldier can do.

"The instant war was declared every machinist, iron worker, steel worker, skilled and unskilled laborer from one end of the country to the other would start to work on war munitions, additions to the fleet, and what not, the scope of which would stagger experts in the profession of war.

"The Japanese army and navy would find more than one Port Arthur on the Pacific coast—there would be five, six, seven or more, each defended by an army of capable men, splendidly officered, with six trunk lines carrying supplies and ammunition across the Rocky Mountains as fast as the best developed locomotives in the world could travel.

Tenth Regiment Machine Guns at San Antonio

U. S. TROOPS READY TO MARCH

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 18.—The army division under General W. H. Carter is to-day in a condition for actual warfare, and none of the officers or men would be surprised at any time if an order came to move to the Mexican border. Reports received here of the situation in Mexico show it is growing worse daily despite reports sent out by the Diaz government.

The insurrection is spreading through the States of Tamaulipas, Coahuila, Nuevo Leon and Sonora. The Yaqui Indians have risen in Sonora and done considerable damage to American and other property. There is much American money invested in that State, especially in irrigation and power projects.

Bloody battles have been fought near Saltillo, Monte Moreles, Durango and at various points in Coahuila and Tamaulipas.

This spreads the activity of the insurrectos from California to the Gulf of Mexico. In many instances they have been successful.

Under the guise of an innocent routine order, General Carter has put his division on a footing for immediate service. A significant paragraph directs the division camp be conducted with a view to the elimination of all unnecessary impedimenta and its reduction to the least point consistent with an efficient program for field service. Prior to the issue of this order a memorandum came from the adjutant-general's office directing that all troops be given the fullest instructions in field training and that recruits be instructed and given target practice as soon as possible at Leon Springs.

This means that General Carter's maneuvre division holds itself in readiness to break camp and take the field as if for actual warfare within two hours. The men must be in constant readiness with a blanket, ten days' rations, shelter tents and 200 rounds of ammunition. No one in the entire division thinks he is here solely to drill.

AMBASSADOR WILSON RETURNS TO MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, March 18.—With the declaration that he believed tranquility would soon again be restored in Mexico, United States Ambassador Lane Wilson again took up his official duties here to-day, having returned from a flying and mysterious visit to his home country. He said he did not look for any break in the cordial relations existing between the United States and Mexico. Mr. Wilson was met by Senor Creel, foreign minister, and several foreign diplomats.

TAFT TO SUBMIT BRITISH TREATY

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 18.—President Taft will submit the arbitration treaty just negotiated between this country and Great Britain to the Senate during the extra session and strongly urge its ratification.

This plan was announced here to-day. This treaty is now before the British Parliament and has so far been cordially received by that body. Just as soon as the President found that the English people seemed almost wholly favorable to the new pact he decided that Congress should do its part by acting on the treaty in extra session. For the first time in the history of the United States or of Great Britain a treaty has been successfully negotiated which refers all questions of national honor and the acquisition of territory to arbitration. This seemed an impossible undertaking. Now, however, the State Departments of two governments have drafted such a measure, and it is ready for ratification.

The President thinks this treaty is the most advanced step ever taken by two great nations toward guaranteeing permanent peace. In all previous treaties only armaments and minor differences were subject to consideration. Under this instrument, however, all questions of whatever nature may be passed upon by arbiters.

The President played golf again to-day, returning to his hotel to receive a committee from the Alabama Legislature.

TRANSPORTS READY FOR MOVE TO MEXICO

GALVESTON, March 18.—The provisional brigade being formed in Galveston made up of coast artillerymen is to be sent to Mexico on transports convoyed by the cruisers Salem and Tacoma if an invasion is decided upon. The arrival of the Tacoma and the transports McClellan, Sumner and Kilpatrick has increased the naval force here to five vessels. All have been ordered to take coal to full bunker capacity and wait for further orders. It was learned on reliable authority that a special train of ten cars left Schuylkill arsenal on March 11 for Galveston. This morning immediately following sick call, Chief Surgeon Manley and his assistants began the work of innoculating the soldiers with anti-typhoid serum.

BLANCO LAYS WASTE CHIHUAHUA REGION

DOUGLAS, Ariz., March 18.—General Blanco, the insurrecto leader who is in disgrace with General Madero for his failure in the Agua Prieta campaign, is laying the country waste on his march southward toward Chihuahua. "Red" Lopez, the outlaw soldier, is strengthening his forces in the mountains and may attack Agua Prieta any time. He is one of the last of the "bad men" and professional gun fighters of the border.

DIAZ SOLDIERS DEFEAT REBELS

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 18.—The Mexican insurrectos have been defeated in a battle fought near Tecate, Lower California. The rebels fled, and as a result the regulars hold all the important mountain defiles in the western part of Lower California. The rebels retreated, leaving behind them Louis Rodriguez, their leader, and seven others dead on the field.

A detachment of rebels who had been ravaging the country were surrounded by Company F of the Eighth Infantry. Mexican regulars in a mountain pass near Tecate, two miles south of the border. The fighting continued until after darkness. The rebels fled and this morning when the regulars started in pursuit the trail of the fugitives was marked by discarded accoutrements. Misunderstanding of orders enabled the rebels to break through the ranks of the Federals.

U. S. PLANT FORCED TO CLOSE IN MEXICO

WASHINGTON, March 18.—United States consul Freeman at Durango, Mex., telegraphed the State Department to-day that the plant of the American Smelting Company at Torreon would probably close shortly, throwing 8,000 persons out of employment. This is a result of the insurrection. Consul Ellsworth at Ciudad Porfirio Diaz telegraphed to-day from Eagle Pass that the Mexican federal authorities had announced they would release Henry Whitte, who has been confined in jail at Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, as an insurrectionist.

REBELS REFUSE PEACE TENDER

By OTHEMAN STEVENS.

EL PASO, March 18.—As closely as the junta can figure the future, it is thought that Madero will remain for some time at San Diego rancho, near Casas Grandes. We had him moving on Juarez a few days ago, and later on Agua Prieta. Both of these reports may or may not be correct, but a "good guess," as they phrased it at the junta, would be that Casas Grandes will be his objective when he does move. My informant said:

"I am confident Madero will not leave until he has Casas Grandes in view. This is in an agricultural region, where there is water, and is a favorable place for concentration. It would form an excellent base for him and that I believe, is likely to be his plan."

Cool Toward Peace.

"Senor Hermandes, Secretary of State of Chihuahua under the Madero regime, takes about the same position as that assumed by Secretary of State Garza, outlined in my dispatch of yesterday about this peace talk and Minister Limantour.

"We have had peace envoys at Chihuahua and here," he said, "and we would consider no such commission unless it came fully credited and its conferences were devoid of all secrecy.

"We do not pose as against peace if it can be properly brought about, but we have reason to distrust anything that comes from the Diaz government, and we would have to be fully guaranteed on every detail of such negotiations. Further, the matter would have to be conducted with no foreign interference. This is a domestic affair entirely. I mean that no kind of intervention would be permitted."

I saw General Navarre this afternoon, and he assured me that no news of any moment had been received. He places no credence whatever in the report circulated about the death of Colonel Cueller.

Telegraph communication with Chihuahua has been resumed, and mail has come from that city dated March 11. The reports are that prices of food stuffs have risen materially. Beans have advanced from 10 and 12 cents to 18 and 20 cents. Alfalfa is $45 a ton, butter is $1.25, canned tomatoes 85 cents, crackers $1.25 a box.

Rebels Are Active.

Several skirmishes near Chihuahua are reported. Seventy Federals were killed at Oretig and fourteen bridges were burned by the rebels.

Santa Eulalia has been twice captured by the Rebels and twice recaptured by the Federals, with the loss of five Federals and six Rebels killed and eight wounded. The insurgents took sixteen prisoners.

A correspondent says he can account only for 1,300 Federal troops in Chihuahua. The authorities ask that reports be sent out that 5,000 soldiers are in the city, but he cannot find that number.

WOLGAST FIGHT MAY END BOUTS ON COAST

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 18.—The anti-prize fight law in this State is to be given a test in the courts as a result of the fight between Lightweight Champion Ad Wolgast and George Memsic. Referee Charles Eyton and Promoter J. McCarey, who were arrested by detectives from the District Attorney's office for violating the law, will be arraigned to-day.

The prosecution will base its case upon the fact that the referee had to stop the fight in the ninth round to save Memsic from a knockout. The promoters, who will attempt to have the law annulled, will set up the claim that the bout was merely an exhibition.

The lightweight champion is $4,000 richer to-day as a result of the bout and showed no perturbation over his arrest. Pacific Coast promoters declare that if the prosecution is able to establish its case in the courts fighting will be dead in California.

Memsic still showed to-day scars of the battle, and State Attorney Fredericks declared that this could probably be used as evidence to show that the bout was more than a sparring exhibition.

Memsic's face was badly bruised where Wolgast had battered him. In the ninth round, when the referee stopped the bout, Memsic was in such shape that he could not raise his hands from his sides, and the champion was beating him about the ring, Memsic staggering from one side to the other.

For five rounds Memsic held the champion safe, and to many it looked that he had a shade the better of the going, but from then on until the bout was stopped in the ninth Wolgast was the whole show.

FIGHT BY ROUNDS.

ROUND ONE—The fight started at 4:15. Memsic tried with a right for the body and glanced off Wolgast's elbow. They immediately clinched. Memsic missed again with a right. Wolgast [illegible] Memsic to the ropes, and Memsic landed heavily on the body with the right. Wolgast landed left on face and right to stomach. Memsic caught Wolgast with a heavy right on the jaw, [illegible] to the floor in a clinch, and Wolgast straightened out on his back as the crowd cheered wildly, because Wolgast was dazed with punishment he received. Memsic pressed toward Wolgast as the gong sounded.

ROUND TWO—Memsic shot left over Wolgast's guard without Wolgast covering up. Wolgast sent right to Memsic's face several times. Memsic's nose was bleeding. Wolgast snapped right to ear and Memsic jolted him in the jaw with left. Memsic sent Wolgast's head back with straight lefts. Wolgast drove right hard into stomach, swung right on wind. Memsic caught him with right swing on jaw, sending him to the ropes.

ROUND THREE—Memsic poked two lefts to face. Wolgast landed a light chop on jaw. Memsic got in the more telling blows in a mix-up.

ROUND FOUR—Wolgast blocked two lefts and mixed with right and Memsic nailed him with a left and right on side of the head. They mixed it at close quarters, and Wolgast was shaken up by a hard right in the hollow of the neck. They leaned together and went in a clinch. Wolgast received a couple of lefts and hard rights, knocking him back, and they had fierce sally, which carried them along the ropes. Memsic swung with both hands at Ad.

ROUND FIVE—Memsic got in one right in the stomach, then they went in for a hard rally. Each man got home with telling uppercuts on the face and body. It was all aggressive work on both sides and hard punches were given. Wolgast finally covered up. The champion loosened up and exchanged uppercuts, both scoring freely. Wolgast sent in the final punch of the round. It was a hard right for the stomach.

ROUND SIX—Memsic landed hard lefts and rights on the forehead. Wolgast landed two hard lefts to the mid-section without return and uppercut on the stomach. Wolgast cut loose a shower of jolts on Memsic's face. Memsic slowed down, but swung a hard right on the ribs as the round closed.

ROUND SEVEN—Wolgast blocked Memsic's hooks. Memsic reached the face with his left, and Wolgast placed a bad right on the ribs. Memsic was forced to cover up. Wolgast took two straight lefts from Memsic, cutting loose with both hands and uppercutting Memsic on the face. Memsic sent Wolgast back with a straight left. They mixed and both landed frequently.

ROUND EIGHT—Both clinched and Wolgast pounded the kidneys with his right. They broke and Memsic reached Wolgast's face with the right. Another clinch and another hard kidney punch followed from Wolgast. Memsic at one time butted Wolgast and murmurs were heard from the crowd. Wolgast uppercut Memsic, pressed his man to the ropes and employed the uppercut with telling effect. Memsic drew away and made full range swings with both hands to the body. He reached the spot. Both were against the ropes when the gong sounded.

ROUND NINE—Wolgast got in a short left on the face and they clinched. After breaking Wolgast shot in a right to the face and Memsic staggered, his limbs apparently beginning to give way. Memsic dropped his arms, and just as Wolgast rushed after him, and presumably tried to give him a right-hander, Referee Eyton stopped the fight. They took Memsic to his corner and there was no demurrer on the decision.

How Advertising Helps the Clerk

The man behind the counter is the biggest factor in any plan of salesmanship. Without his co-operation it is almost impossible to successfully market goods. He is the one who comes in closest contact with the buyer, and upon his knowledge of the goods often depends the amount of sales.

Advertising reaches this most important factor. He, like the consumer, is a newspaper reader, and in talking to the consumer about your goods you are also talking to him. His knowledge of the product is increased, and he is enabled thus to talk more comprehensively about your goods than if he knew nothing about them.

So that advertising even when it's aimed at the consumer, if it's explanatory of the goods, is really increasing the efficiency of the clerk, because it educates him to better salesmanship so far as the product is concerned.

Take two lines of goods, the one without advertising and the other with advertising. The merchant will sell the advertised line faster because as a rule a great many more know about it than about the unadvertised line.

This is why newspaper advertising is most effective. It reaches the clerk in the store as well as the consumer. It makes him the manufacturer's salesman or the merchant's better salesman. Newspapers deal with events of current interest, and therefore have an interest that other media have not. Everyone reads a newspaper, and everyone in any given locality must see your advertising when it appears in a newspaper.

The various features of the Boston American are of such a nature that it interests all classes, and therefore presents a wider market for the merchant who advertises in its columns than the ordinary cut-and-dried newspaper. In many sections of Boston even those who swear by the conservative evening paper buy an American to get the latest news. It reaches 400,000 of the masses and the classes every day. If you want to know more about what the American can do for you, address Trade Aid Department, Boston American.

THE MEETING OF THE OFFICIALS of the New York Jockey Club, and the failure to assign any racing dates, shows clearly and unmistakably, the handwriting upon the wall. Apparently there will be no racing in New York State this season, except at Saratoga, and the thoroughbred horse will find a Chinese wall confronting him in the land of Father Knickerbocker. Isn't it a wonder that Larry Jerome, Pierre Lorrillard and Mike Dwyer do not turn over in their graves. But the news from Canada that has just come to me, assures plenty of racing the coming Summer, and for the boys who enjoy a flyer, the dates are here appended: Ontario Jockey Club, Toronto, May 20 to 27; Montreal Jockey Club, June 3 to 10; Hamilton Jockey Club, June 17 to 24; Niagara Racing Association, Fort Erie, July 1 to 8; Windsor Fair Grounds, July 15 to 22; Niagara Racing Association, July 29 to August 5; Hamilton Jockey Club, August 12 to 19; Windsor Fair Grounds, August 28 to September 4; Montreal Jockey Club, September 9 to 16; Ontario Jockey Club, Toronto, September 23 to 30. By the time that October comes about, anybody who has any loose change in their clothes, will probably be willing to cry enough. In the meantime it looks like a Summer of Rouse-mit-Em.

AND NOW COMES AN OFFER FROM over the water of $35,000 for a boxing bout during coronation week between Sam Langford, the Boston tar baby, and Jack Johnson, as the latest inducement of Hugh McIntosh, the Australian promoter. The money offered is far too small to tempt the sable rivals for the world's championship, and Mr. McIntosh is entitled to another draw for the purse.

THE BOUT BETWEEN CHAMPION AD Wolgast and George Memsic, the third rater, furnished no surprise for followers of the boxing game. Wolgast had the age over his inconspicuous rival, and the bout terminated as everyone had predicted. And still the chances of getting Wolgast into the same ring with Packey McFarland continue wonderfully remote, and there seems little if any chance in the near future for a battle for the lightweight championship worthy of the name.

THE THERMOMETER DOWN AT NEW Orleans, where the Chicago are in training, showed but fifty-two degrees this week, which caused many of the boys to pray for steam, and the pitchers kept closely to the hotels. If this brand of weather is the best the far Southland can boast, it looks as if there might be a radical switch in the journey to the Spring training camps next year.

* * *

WORD COMES FROM THE WEST that the State of Oklahoma is stirred from border to border by the coming match between Carl Morris, the hope of the white race, and Mike Schreck. Prayers have been offered in the churches that Morris may win, and one, Parson Jeter, is preaching sermons upon the bout in the native camp of Morris at Sapulpa. If Schreck should ever land a wallop upon the over-rated white hope from the plains, it now looks as if Oklahoma might secede from the Union.

ONE of the most interesting boxing bouts of the Winter season should be the return match between Johnny Glover of South Boston and Jeff Doherty of New Haven, Ct., at the Quincy Rowing Association meeting next Thursday night. In the recent bout between these boys a lightning fast contest was seen, and many felt that the decision against the South Boston boy was open to challenge. The result is a tremendous interest in the coming bout, for which both are now in active training.

* * *

WORD COMES FROM THE TRAINING grounds of the Chicago White Sox that Jiggs Donahue has no chance of making the initial cushion for Hughey Duffy's charges. The old boy is there with all his old-time pepper, but illness has left its mark upon the old favorite, and there is no chance of his getting the position with the clan of Duffy.

AL DELMONT PROVES TO FAST FOR BRITT

BALTIMORE, Md., March 18.—After fifteen rounds of hard fighting before the Eureka Athletic Club, Al Delmont of Boston was given the decision over Young Britt of this city. Delmont owes his victory to his aggressiveness and good ring generalship.

Quickly recognizing the fact that Britt was his superior at boxing and long range fighting, Delmont continually kept boring in and dealt out his punishment at short range and in-fighting.

WOLGAST MATCHED TO MEET LA GRAVE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—Promoter Milton T. Clark of the Metropolitan Club has signed Champion Ad Wolgast and Anton La Grave of San Francisco to box twenty rounds before his club in this city on March 31. Wolgast is to receive $7,500, win, lose or draw, while Le Grave is content to accept $1,000 irrespective of the outcome. The fighters have agreed to make 133 pounds ringside.

BLOOD POISONING FROM GOTCH BOUT

BALTIMORE, March 18.—Owing to a badly infected shin wound from which it is feared blood poisoning will result, Gus Schoenlein (Americus) was obliged to call off his bout with Yankee Rogers, at Elmira, N. Y., as well as his other engagements.

In the match in Boston with Gotch, Americus developed an abrasion on his left shin. This wound was repeatedly irritated by training, and especially in the bout with Roller in Kansas City.

CLUBS IN DEADLOCK.

ST LOUIS, March 18.—The projected Spring series between the Browns and Cardinals may be declared off. Manager Bresnahan of the Cardinals wants more than seven games or none, while Manager Wallace of the American League team says that with his big squad he can better practice without playing the Cardinals series.

SULLIVAN REFEREES YALE.

James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, has been selected to referee the dual track meet between Harvard and Yale at New Haven, May 13. Leslie Soule of Dorchester, president and manager of the Yale University Athletic Association, notified the secretary of his appointment.

PITCHER TUCKEY SIGNS.

Tom Tuckey, the veteran Connecticut League southpaw pitcher, who has had two tryouts with the Boston Nationals, has signed to pitch for the Waterbury team of the Connecticut League this season.

LID ON IN BROCKTON.

BROCKTON, March 18.—City Marshal Michael B. Allen decided to clamp the lid on boxing exhibitions, particularly those being conducted by the Shoe City A. Marshal Allen said it is impossible for clubs to conduct their bouts under the State laws.

THE amateur and semi-professional teams of Greater Boston are not going to be outdone by the big fellows, and are already in the field arranging their schedules. SOMERVILLE HAS GOOD MATERIAL

A call for candidates for the Somerville High School baseball team will be issued in a few days by Robert Tift, who has been engaged to coach the team for the coming season. So far the battery candidates are the only men to have a workout, they having practised in the Armory. Only a few of last year's veterans will be with the team, but they are a large squad of promising youths and under the careful coaching of Tift should be able to turn out a championship nine.

Artie Williams, captain of the team, will hold down his old position at second base. Johnny Norton of last year's nine will play shortstop. Two infield positions and all the outfield positions will be covered by new men. Among the large squad of pitchers, Pike, the veteran, looks the most promising. Bob Garland, who did not play last season owing to an injury to his leg, is the leading candidate for catcher.

American Correspondent with Red Sox on "Coast-to-Coast" Tour.

Merton E. Burke.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.—It is remarkable what a civilizing influence a little of mother's cooking is, no matter where or when you find it. Take the case of that band of Red Sox athletes, at present located at Westminster in Los Angeles, and the St. Mark at Oakland.

A few days ago they were sore in limbs and body and mentally distressed to the point where each and every man was nursing a little private grouch.

Pronto, a change of food and a warm ray of sunshine and the boys step into line with angelic dispositions and ambitions to become big leaguers. A baseball player, next to an emotional actress, is the most delicate mechanism yet recorded in the Smithsonian Institute.

Keeps Bosses Busy.

Manager Patsy Donovan and Treasurer Hughie McBreen have to be diplomats, sociologists, psychologists and mind readers, as well as having reading knowledge of palmistry and phrenology to keep things running smoothly in camp. But they are equal to the task and life in Red Sox training quarters is one long sweet dream of peace and good fellowship.

But as for playing ball—well, if Mutt was manager instead of P. J. Donovan, he would probably swat the outfit over the bean with a bowl of tripe.

Imagine the boasting Red Sox getting trimmed by a bunch of minor leaguers, as they did yesterday, 4 to 2, by the Vernons.

However, the Yanigans trimmed the Seals in San Francisco, 10 to 4. Manager Donovan loosened up on his pitchers yesterday and let them try out their curves. Heretofore they have been pitching only straights. Perhaps that accounts for the eleven hits recorded against them.

Bedient started the game and was relieved by Ray Collins. Tommy Madden began the catching and Kielnow finished. Bedient is one of the new men signed for trial. Donovan has been working him pretty hard, but I think he has in mind giving him a preparatory year at Sacramento before taking him East. Collins is in good form and will deliver the goods this year again. Tommy Madden's arm is in excellent condition and he can find bases with his eyes shut.

Harold is Sensitive.

The errors recorded against Janvrin were not serious ones, but have made him very nervous. Harold is a sensitive youngster, and the task of making good in big league work worries him considerably. He is going to be carefully trained by Manager Donovan, however, and I believe if he stands up under big league pitching, as I think he will, he will be the biggest third baseman in any league in two years.

Tris Speaker was not feeling well and was laid off for the day, Mahoney being in his place. Mahoney, by the way, is a coming lad, and I understand is much wanted by a certain strong baseball team. He may be farmed out the first of the year and called in for Red Sox duty when some of the old players need rest.

Weather, collar wilting.

STRONG NINE FOR WINCHESTER

The Winchester A. A., composed mostly of young men of Winchester, will put a strong team on the field again this year and Manager William Callahan has arranged for the opening game against the Medford A. A., on April 19, at Manchester Field.

This year's team will be strengthened by the acquisition of Morry, who played a fast game in the short field last year for the Notre Dames, and Cassidy, a hard hitting outfielder, formerly of the Malden Athletics. The probable line-up of the team for the first game will be, Somerville, pitcher;2 Flaherty, catcher; Ledue, first; Kenney, second; Morry, shortstop; O'Connor, third base, with Foley, Cassidy, Budreau and Thompson for the outfield.

Manager Callahan will not play this year, as he wishes to devote all of his time to running the nine. He would like to hear from some strong nines around Boston for Saturday afternoon and holiday games.

ROXBURY A. A. IN LINE FOR TITLE

The Roxbury A. A. is now in the field looking for new worlds to conquer. The team is composed of former members of the Notre Dames of Roxbury and the different high school nines. The team should be ranked among the leading amateur baseball clubs this year, if the past records of some of the players count for anything.

The nine will be managed by Martin Broderick, who held down a similar position with the Notre Dames with such great success for the past six years. Broderick will also take his turn in the box when occasion requires, and is bound to make good.

The bulk of the twirling, however, will be done by Leo Callahan, formerly a member of the High School of Commerce baseball team, and a member of the all-interscholastic nine last season. Callahan is one of the best pitchers now in the ranks of the "simon pures."

Other good players on the team are "Abe" Good, a brother of Gene Good, who at one time pulled down a monthly allowance from the treasury of the present Rustlers; Henry Bond, formerly of Roxbury High; "Slim" Robert, at one time connected with the English High nine, and Frank Sullivan, Harry Finch and Alley Miller.

Any team desiring to book dates with this speedy bunch of amateur ball tossers should get in touch with Martin Broderick, No. 23 Fulda street, Roxbury.

FORM NEW HIGH SCHOOL LEAGUE

The Norfolk Interscholastic Baseball League has been formed and is made up from the high schools of Hyde Park, Dedham, Norwood, Needham, and Wellesley, and it promises to be one of the strongest leagues in the State. Twenty-one games are scheduled.

A committee of three, consisting of H. J. Stitt, Hyde Park; D. Freeman, Dedham and H. Wiswall, Wellesley, have been elected to choose a suitable trophy for the winning team.

Each team will play two games with every other league team and the trophy will not be awarded to any team unless it plays its full schedule. Any school team failing to complete its league schedule will not for that year be suspended, but games played with a team so suspended will not affect the standing of the teams still in the league.

Harry Gould will be captain of Hyde Park team, and John McKenna manager. Hyde Park will have thirteen home games, and they will start the season with Chelsea High, at Chelsea on April 11. Hyde Park High's home games follow:

April 11, Chelsea at Chelsea.

ILLINOIS MAY HAVE SIX-ROUND BOUTS

CHICAGO, March 18.—The possibility of the Illinois State Legislature passing a bill allowing six-round boxing matches has created a stir in local pugilistic circles. The bill in question was introduced at Springfield yesterday by Senator John E. Madigan of Chicago.

Senator Madigan stated in Springfield that he was confident the bill would pass the Senate, and that it had a good chance to get through the House. Under the terms of the bill, no decisions can be rendered, exhibitions must be before bona-fide chartered athletic clubs and no prizes or purses are to be awarded to the contestants.

MERCIER HAD ALL THE BETER OF GO

AUBURN, Me., March 18.—In one of the best boxing exhibitions ever held in Auburn, Kid Mercier of Lawrence, Mass., and Johnny Stewart of Bangor fought two six-round bouts to a draw before the Auburn Athletic Club. While in accordance with the Maine law no decision was given, Mercier had a shade the better of the go.

JACK TWIN SULLIVAN LOSES FAST BOUT

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 18.—Jack Dillon, the Hoosier champion, earned the popular decision over Mike (Twin) Sullivan of Boston in a slashing ten-round bout before the International A. C. Barring the first two rounds, which were slow and about even, Dillon had the better of it. He played continually for the latter's stomach and Sullivan did not fancy this.

MEDFORD AND DEDHAM BOAT CLUBS IN TIE

After two extra five-minute periods were played the Medford Boat Club and Dedham Boat Club hockey teams were forced to call off their match at the Arena with the score tied at 3 to 3. Johnny Norton did splendid work for Medford and Pratt was the star for Dedham.

BODLEY MAKES WORLD'S RECORD

ATLANTIC CITY, March 18.—Bodley of the University of Pennsylvania clipped ten seconds from the A. A. U. 1,000-yard indoor running record of the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. at the championships held here. Time—2m. 28 2-5s.

MONTREAL PLAYS BOSTON TO-NIGHT

Fraser, f.	f., Winsor
Nairn, f.	f., Hopkins

It will be Montreal against Boston to-night for hockey honors when the Montreal A. A., one of the best amateur teams in Canada, will battle on the ice with the Boston Hockey Club at the Boston Arena.

The Montreal hockey followers claim that the M. A. A. is one of the best fighting clubs that has represented Canada this Winter, and will show the way to the local seven in the game that they were born and bred on.

The presence of Lady Earl Grey and her daughters as the chief guests of the occasion will also be an incentive for the Montreal team to show the best that is in them, as the noted Canadian spectators will be expecting a victory over the American team because of the greater number of years the game has progressed across the border.

An added attraction to the hockey match will be the appearance of Herr Held of Berlin, who skates a selection of school figures from the International Skating Union program used in class tests by the Berlin Skating Club, and he will also give an exhibition of original free skating of great dash and vigor. The display will take place in the interval between the two halves of the contest.

BOWLING ALLEY NEWS

The Pettingell & Andrews team, in their match with the Stuart-Howland Co., in the Electrical League, broke two league records by getting 538 for a single string and 1,472 for a grand total. The best work of the evening was done by Pierce, he getting 330.

While rolling at the Hayward alleys Sam Pike hit the candles for the following scores: 95, 106, 111, 96, 111, 93, 100, 101, 100, 95, 126, 96, 92, 134, 103, 111, 99—1,775—which is excellent bowling, with an average of a little over 104.

"Old Man" Brown had some tough leaves in his match against the Worcester team, but Brown brought up most of the hard ones. Spares did not come very often, and when they did come he surely made them count.

Lutz and Edmands, who bowl for Stuart-Howland in the Electrical League should make good bowlers next season, as they are hard workers and dig for every pin.

Little Timmy Brennan of the Clark & Mills team, has a very odd delivery. Timmy can, however, box up all kinds of bad leaves, single pins is his specialty.

WELSH IS HERE FOR MANY BOUTS

NEW YORK, March 18.—Freddy Welsh, formerly lightweight champion of England, has arrived in New York upon the liner Lusitania, for a series of fights in this country.

Welsh declared that he would seek to get a match with Packey McFarland of Chicago. Welsh will also box Pat Moore of Philadelphia, and possibly Knockout Brown, the clever and sensational New York lightweight.

Welsh has contracts for five matches before the National Sporting Club in this city.

He said that Hugh McIntosh, the English fight promoter, is planning to sail for America soon, in order to try to persuade Champion Jack Johnson to fight Sam Langford.

SOUTH BOSTON MEETS DORCHESTER MONDAY

The South Boston High Alumni will play the Dorchester High Alumni, the first of a series of basketball games, at the South Boston High gym next Monday evening.

Both teams will present their strongest lineups and a hard game is looked for. Both teams are composed of former high school stars. South Boston will have in its lineup, Grant l.f., J. Ambrose r.f., Barton c, Barry l.b., and W. Barron, r.b. Dorchester will have Seal Sullivan, Charlie Hoernle, Lyons, Mullaly and Larry Conley.

The S. B. H. A. second team is to play Dorchester A. A., composed of Dorchester High School players, as a second attraction. The second team has only lost one game in three years, and claims the championship of the State, and stand ready to defend it against all comers, the Wood A. C. preferred. Nagle of the second team scored 25 baskets from the floor last week against the Mohawk A. C. of Winthrop.

HARRY GISSING RUNS LAST RACE TO-DAY

NEW YORK, March 18.—Harry Gissing, the champion middle-distance runner, who won four championship titles last year, has quit the New York A. C. He sent in his resignation and announced that he will never again carry the "Mercury Foot" in competition.

He said that a business proposition would prevent him from keeping in condition, and, rather than race when not at his best, he decided to quit the club.

Gissing said that he will run his last race at the Spanish War Veterans games to-day. He added that he might try for the American team which will compete at the Olympic games in Stockholm next year.

HARVARD GIVES CUP TO YALE '14

Each member of the Yale freshman relay team, which was awarded the decision in the race against the Harvard freshman relay team in the B. A. A. meet because of a foul, and which declined to accept the decision and offered the honors to the Harvard freshmen, has been presented with a cup by the Harvard 1914 team in appreciation of their action. The cups were accompanied by a letter to each man, complimenting him and the team on the display of true sportsmanship.

RUSTLERS PLAY FIRST REAL GAME OF SEASON

By R. W. LARDNER.

American Correspondent with the Rustlers on Augusta Tour.

R. W. Lardner.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 18.—This is the day, the biggest day for Augusta since Ty Cobb shook its dust from his restless heels. The program, as announced this morning, included extra hard practice for Fred Tenney's Rustlers and a real game of ball this afternoon, a game graced by the presence of President William Howard Taft.

Instead of the formable second team, Tommy Stouch's Augusta Club was carded to oppose the men of Boston. While the Augustans may not be as strong as our own Yanigans, a game seems more like a game when it is played between teams representing two different cities.

The local bunch has been rehearsing for over a year, and Manager Stouch promised that it would put up a strong argument against the big leagues. It's a cinch his charges were resolved to try hard, for a victory over a National League Club is a nice achievement, and any kind of a victory witnessed by the nation's Chief Executive is greatly to be desired.

Boxes Too Small for Taft.

There was no parade on the slate. President Taft's secretary announced that President Taft would come to the yard in an auto, unaccompanied except for the usual bodyguard, and that he would pick out his own seat in the grandstand. It is not difficult to pick a place in the local stand either. The boxes are twenty-five cents extra, but there is not room in any of them for a person of the President's dimensions.

Mr. Taft is a bug on the national pastime, one of the bugs who care not what their seats are made of nor where they are located so long as they have a clear view of the game.

Manager Tenney said that the Regulars he has been using in the daily practice games will be sent against Augusta and that two or three pitchers will be given chances to exhibit their prowess. Naturally, every member of the hurling staff was anxious to be called on, although Hub Perdue said he did not care much.

Hub Purdue's Comment.

"Mr. Taft is President of the United States and a very big man," remarked Hub, "but I don't believe he eats as much as I do and I know I am a better pitcher than he is, even if I never stayed in the big leagues long enough to get more than a cup of coffee."

Arthur Irwin, the veteran scout for the New York Yankees, came over from Athens yesterday to see about accommodations for the men of Chase.

The Highlanders will arrive next Friday morning, and after the game on Saturday will leave for Atlanta, where they have some dates. Mr. Irwin expressed himself as duly impressed with the actions of some of Tenney's kids.

Inside baseball is being drilled into the boys by Manager Fred. Hit and run signs were distributed yesterday [illegible] the Athletics practiced working [illegible] er on attack. Arthur Butler and Josh Clarke were the only two, beside the Regulars, who were honored by being taught the new signs, which may be taken to mean that both of them will be kept either for regular or utility roles. Josh is a swell outfielder and appears to be sure of some kind of a job with the Rustlers. He is probably the best judge of a fly ball there is in the squad. He is also a hustler and a man whose supply of pepper is never failing and big enough for two or three ball teams.

Errors figured in every one of the Regular tallies, except the one earned when Doc Miller hoisted the pill over the right field fence for a home run. Doc was due to pull off something like that, for he hadn't shown much influence with the ball in previous trips to the plate. His drive came in the fifth off Chick Evans and traveled almost as far as the one Flaherty poled the other day. Curtis pitched the first four innings for the Regulars and was scored on once. Young tripled over Collins' head in the third and rode home on Buster Brown's long fly.

Tyler worked the last three innings for the real team and looked good. He had three strikeouts to his credit, getting St. Patrick a couple of times. Collins opened the attack on Buster Brown with a clean one-base poke to left. Goode bunted to Buster, who pegged to second to head off the post, but Young dropped the throw. Herzog fouled out. Miller bounded one slowly between Brown and Butler. Buster grabbed it and had a foot race with Collins for third base, Bill getting the decision. Collins scored while Ingerton was forcing Miller at second.

The Awakening of Darius

The Circle Bar Boy Learns He Isn't So Much of a Lady-Killer, After All, When He Hears the Stockman's Story

By KENNETT HARRIS

THE stocktender looked up from the harness that he was mending at the Circle Bar boy, and there was a sardonic quality in his grin.

"You sure must be one of these regular lady-killers, Herbie," he said. "So she give you her picture! Jiminee! Didn't charge you nothing for it?"

"What you mean?" demanded the Circle Bar boy, gruffly. "S'pose she's retailin' 'em at ten cents apiece?"

The stocktender grinned again.

"Not by no means," he replied. "She's too much the lady, and ten cents ain't no object to her. What gets me is you waltzing right in and hanging your hat behind the door on such short acquaintance. You didn't even have no letters of introduction to her, did you?"

"Here's fellows, like me and Tubby here that have been in this here section since Heck was a pup and haven't had the nerve to even ask for a knockdown to her. Lessee, Tubby, we've known her for clost on to thirty years, haven't we? She was quite a kid then. Couldn't have been more'n twenty-five or six."

"Herbie reminds me somewhat of Darius Leffingwell at his age," remarked the stocktender. "If you was to see Darius, now, you'd see a mighty sensible sort of a man and the father of eight interesting children, a man you could trust by himself in Cheyenne or Denver, or even Chicago. I understand that Darius went to New York two years ago, and came back with the gold filling in his teeth still intact. But there was a time, oh, Tubby?"

The Story of Darius

Tubby nodded and the stocktender resumed:

"Him and his granddaddy and his mother and a sprinkling of brothers and sisters was trying to hog a whole hundred and sixty from a poor, cramped cow outfit that didn't have more than fifty miles square of range to its brand. They had traveled clear from Utah, that family, and they had seen a heap of things, but they hadn't ever seen a cook-stove or the steam cars.

"Darius was a heap interested in us boys. We was different to any he'd ever seen before. Our names was different, to. He allowed he didn't know there was as many folks in the country as us, and he was bound and set he'd come along.

"He was seventeen years old, then, and counted himself full grown, so there wasn't no objections from the family, and being as he rode and throwed a rope better than any puncher in the outfit, and had more cow sense generally, there wasn't no objections from the boss.

"We will now draw a veil over clost onto a year of our young hero's life," proceeded the stocktender. "Suffice it to say that in the Spring of what-do-you-care, two solitary horsemen might have been seen forty rods in advance of the rest of the boys riding into the town of Blueblanket, which was then in its palmy days. One of them was me and the other was Darius; and it was Darius's first chance at a real live town.

"On that occasion I ain't blushing to admit that I kept strictly sober. I called for pop when it was put up to me; and Darius also took pop. He liked it so well he drank six bottles of it before I could drag him away from the bar.

"Then I took him away to see the other sights of the town. I showed him Judge Wilson's new steel windmill that he's just put up, and I showed him the wax woman's heads in the millinery store window and I showed him the new brick calaboose and explained how the bricks was laid and stuck together with mortar, and, altogether, we had a whale of a time. Then I took him over to Andy McDonald's Jewel the-ater and Juanita De Lancy came out and did her little song and dance.

"Goshamity!" He Says

"The minute she came, I felt Darius start and begin to tremble, and, when I looked at him, I knew directly that I'd brought the boy to the wrong place. His mouth was part open, but he was scarcely breathing and his eyes seemed glight. I spoke to him twice and dug my elbow into his ribs; but he didn't pay any attention until she finished her turn and went capering off. Then he turns to me and says, oshamity! I never knowed there was ything like her on the top of the earth!'

"'There's quite a few, son,' I says. et's go.'

"'No,' says he, 'she's coming again. I ouldn't miss her for a thousand dollars. m, do you think I could get to talk to r?'

"'Certainly not,' I says. 'She's too haughty and exclusive to talk to cowpunchers.'

"He made out to wait until she come out again an' then I heard him say: 'I'm a-going to see her or bust both sinches,' kind of to himself.

"I told him mildly, but firmly, that he wasn't a-going to do not such a thing, but I might have spared my breath. He turned on me, that curly, red-headed, freckle face babe, and he told me to mind my own business in such a way that I minded it.

"I didn't say that the kid could shoot, did I? Well, he could, and what's more I seen that he would, if I pressed the limit, o I left him to the devices and desires of s own heart, which was to beg the favor a few moments' conversation with Miss uita de Lancy.

trange to say, Herbie, he got to see I didn't hear the results before we n our way back to camp. I didn't m no questions, because he acted as didn't want me to. He seemed to ing a-heap as we fogged along the hen he says, all of a sudden: what's your views on the cond behaviors of a real lady? You ain't never met up with none ex Maw and one or two of the neighbors. But how about short skirts, to begin with?'

"It All Depends," I Says

"'It depends,' I says, 'whether the lady is your lady or some other fellow's lady. If it was my lady I'd favor shoe-top lengths for the high mark.'

"He studied on that for a mile or two and then he says, 'How about smoking cigarettes? Maw dips snuff and Grammaw she smokes a cob.'

"'I don't hold with a lady smoking cigarettes myself,' I says. 'Some does,' says I, 'but I'm kinder strict in my ideas, and I think that snuff dipping and smoking a cob is about as far as a female ought to go.'

"He studies on that for a piece and, finally, he takes a photygraft out from his bosom and tears it up and scatters it to the four winds of heaven. 'I kind of had my suspicions, Sam,' he says, 'but now I feel sure she ain't what I thought she was, when I first seen her. I ain't a-going to answer her letters even, by Jing!'"

"And as far as I know," said the stocktender. "Darius never made the same mistake agin."

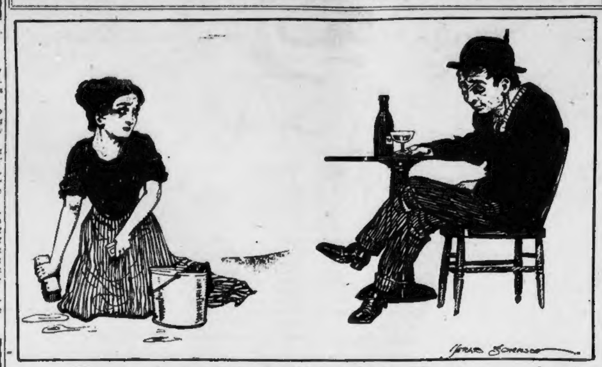
"Why, mother," answered the daughter, mildly, "I have learned to speak as my teachers do—that is all."

"Well, cut it out! Them poverty-stricken hirelin's that we pay good money to teach our kids are altogether too darned uppish. They don't move in our circles, an' what call have they got to interduce their vulgar slang into our set? You talk like you was raised to talk, and show your teachers their place!"

One of These Votes---One of Them Can't

Here Is a Picture That Should Make Every Voter Sit Up and Think



What does the Anti-Suffragist think of this? What does every decent and sensible human being think about it?

Here is a man, a drunkard, and here is a woman that works to support him and take care of his family. The drunken man can vote and influence the laws that are made—including the laws that encourage the selling of whiskey.

AND THE WOMAN SCRUBBING THE FLOOR, CREATING AND CARING FOR THE CHILDREN, CAN'T VOTE.

Is there anybody, but a lunatic or a foolish Anti-Suffragist, with a squeezed waist and a squeezed brain, that doesn't detest this picture and the injustice that it represents?

John Smith in Search of a Wife

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No. 3—The Lady Stenographer with Whom He Came Perilously Near Falling in Love.

"THERE once was a young man named Blaney,
Who proposed to a typist called Janie.
When his friends said, 'Oh, dear)
She's so old and so queer,'
He said, 'Yes, but the day was so rainy.'"

JOHN SMITH had been in the house for ten days.

He had the grippe; he was cross; he was blue; he was miserable.

His rooms were chaos; for James, the man who looked after them, had chosen this inauspicious occasion to have the grippe also.

At first his men friends had looked in on him during the day or evening, but gradually they had dropped off.

Even Bill, his faithful chum, had not appeared since John had told him grouchily that he was a fool and a few other complimentary things.

"Thanks!" said Bill huffily and took his departure. It was now three days since John had seen any face save that of the gaunt charwoman who was most inadequately filling the place of James.

There were letters to be answered—business letters that must be attended to.

The Girl Stenographer

The office stenographer could not be spared; so John telephoned to an agency and an hour later there was a quick ring of the doorbell.

"The stenographer," said John, with a despairing glance at the disordered room. "I hope to heavens it's a man."

But it wasn't a man; it was a tall, young woman, plain of face and with a very smart costume which fitted perfectly a very good figure.

"Miss Lake, from the Jones agency," she said briskly. "You want some typing done, I believe."

"Yes, I do; won't you take off your hat and sit down—that is, if you can find a chair to sit on," said John. "The place is in an awful mess; my man is ill."

"Oh, that's all right," said Miss Lake cheerfully. "We'll just put these things there, and those things there, and gather up these papers, and pull the shades a little lower, and things will look better in a jiffy."

And by some miraculous means things did look better in a jiffy, and John and Miss Lake settled down to work.

She worked quickly and intelligently, and by luncheon time much had been accomplished.

"I'll go out to luncheon now," she said, "and if I were you, Mr. Smith, I would drink some hot milk; it will soothe your nerves after all this dictation, and you will be ready for the afternoon work."

A Little Tea Party

At 5 o'clock John leaned back in his chair and said:

"We've got through an awful lot of work, Miss Lake; don't you think we deserve a rest? What do you say to a cup of tea? I'm a first-class tea brewer."

Miss Lake demurred a moment; then thought it would be very nice, and while John got out the tea things she straightened the room.

"There's nothing like a woman's touch to make things comfortable," said John, appreciatively, as they sipped the tea.

"Do you need me to-morrow, Mr. Smith?" asked Miss Lake at parting.

Yes, Mr. Smith did need her to-morrow, and all the rest of the week, as the doctor had insisted he could not go out for several days.

So Miss Lake came, and every day the tea party ended the day's work.

She was very much at home, now, and confided in John her ambition to have a business of her own.

"Unless you marry," said John, slyly.

Miss Lake tossed her marcelled head. "Indeed, I don't mean to marry unless I get a very good offer," she said.

She Certainly Had the Knack

She talked rather well, in a somewhat free and easy style, and she certainly had the knack of making the room look neat and comfortable. She straightened it every day as a matter of course now.

John Smith was beginning to think about her a good deal. His isolation and dependence upon her for company was making him a trifle sentimental.

On the fifth day, as he and Miss Lake were having tea, the door opened and in walked his friend Bill.

"Sorry to have been away so long, old chap," he began, "but the fact is I have been—oh, I beg your pardon"—he ended lamely, and he observed the smart figure behind the tea table.

"My stenographer, Miss Lake, Mr. Gray," said John, stiffly.

Bill had evidently come to stay; so, after a few uncomfortable minutes of stilled conversation, Miss Lake departed.

Neither man mentioned her after she left, and presently Bill, too, took his departure.

"Nice Girl," He Thought

"Nice girl, Miss Lake," thought John, as he settled himself for a smoke. "Would make a good, sensible wife, I wager; makes a fellow so comfortable and satisfied."

The next afternoon, at tea time, there came a ring at the bell, and in answer to John's "Come in," there was a soft rustle of skirts and laughter, and in came Bill and Marion Carroll.

"We've come to take you to my house for dinner," said Marion, gaily. "No excuses; we have the doctor's permission. I'll talk to Miss Lake while you dress," she added, graciously.

The contrast between Marion's pretty, gentle manners and Miss Lake's overdone assurance was very apparent, as the wily Bill had intended it should be.

"I was a stenographer myself before I married, said Marion, "so I know how a long day's work takes it out of one," as Miss Lake began an explanation as to how she came to be having tea with John.

"Jack," said Bill, as he wandered about John's room, while the former changed into his evening clothes. "She's a nice, capable girl, all right, but she isn't the golden girl; she won't do, old man; it's just a case of propinquity, that's all."

"I suppose not," said John gloomily.

To-day's Best Story

THEY got to telling stories at the Army and Navy Club about Admiral Sir John Fisher, who recently resigned as first sea lord of England.

Admiral Fisher is a bluff, blunt, old-fashioned seaman, about whom anecdotes cluster as bees on a honey-comb. One of the classics has to do with a former boatswain on Fisher's ship, who insisted upon seeing him at the Admiralty Offices in London. Fisher was busy, and refused to be bothered. "Hi'll stay h'until Hi do see 'im," said the boatswain.

Sir John was not in good humor, and when this was reported to him, he snapped out, "I'll see him in hell."

The boatswain had edged into the office and heard this promise. "Hi know that, Sir John," he said, "but Hi want to 'ave a talk with you first."

And he had the talk.

One recent morning, according to the gossip that has come across the sea, Sir John, very grumpy, stalked into his office. A very polite—an effusively polite—caller awaited him. "And how are you this morning, Sir John" he asked.

Fisher bent his brows at the visitor. "How should any gentleman feel at this hour in the morning?" he asked.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Afternoon of Tuesday

MME. DAUVRAY and Celia found Adele Rossignol, to give Adele Tace the name which she assumed, waiting for them impatiently in the garden of a hotel at Annecy, on the Promenade du Paquier.

She was a tall, lithe woman, and she was dressed, by the purse and wish of Helen Vauquier, in a robe and a long coat of sapphire velvet, which toned down the coarseness of her good looks and lent something of elegance to her figure.

"So it is mademoiselle," Adele began, with a smile of raillery, "who is so remarkably clever."

"Clever?" answered Celia, looking straight at Adele, as though through her she saw mysteries beyond. She took up her part at once. Since for the last time it had got to be played there must be no fault in the playing.

The Duel of Women's Wits

For her own sake, for the sake of Mme. Dauvary's happiness, she must carry it off to-night with success. The suspicions of Adele Rossignol must obtain no verification. She spoke in a quiet and most serious voice. "Under spirit-control no one is clever. One does the bidding of the spirit which controls."

"Perfectly," said Adele in a malicious tone. "I only hope you will see to it, mademoiselle, that some amusing spirits control you this evening and appear before us."

"I am only the living gate by which the spirit forms pass from the realm of mind into the world of matter," Celia replied.

"Quite so," said Adele comfortably "Now let us be sensible and dine. We can amuse ourselves with mademoiselle's rigmaroles afterwards."

Mme. Dauvray was indignant. Celia, for her part, felt humiliated and small. They sat down to their dinner in the garden, but the rain began to fall and drove them indoors. There were a few people dining at the same hour, but none near enough to overhear them. Alike in the garden and the dining room.

Adele Tace kept up the same note of ridicule and disbelief. She had been carefully tutored for her work. She was able to cite the stock cases of exposure—"les freres Davenport," as she called them; Eusepia Palladino and Dr. Slade. She knew the precautions which had been taken to prevent trickery and where those precautions had failed. Her whole conversation was carefully planned to one end, and to one end alone.

She wished to produce in the minds of her companions so complete an impression of her scepticism that it would seem the most natural thing in the world to both of them that she should insist upon subjecting Celia to the severest tests. The rain ceased and they took their coffee on the terrace of the hotel. Mme. Dauvray had been really pained by the conversation of Adele Tace. She had all the missionary zeal of a fanatic.

"I do hope, Adele, that we shall make you believe. But we shall. Oh, I am confident we shall." And her voice was feverish.

Adele dropped for a moment her tone of raillery.

"I am not unwilling to believe," she said, "but I cannot. I am interested—yes. You see how much I have studied the subject. But I cannot believe. I have heard stories of how these manifestations are produced—stories which make me laugh. I cannot help it. The tricks are so easy.

"A young girl wearing a black frock which does not rustle—it is always a black frock, is it not, because a black frock cannot be seen in the dark?—carrying a scarf or veil, with which she can make any sort of head dress if only she is a little clever and shod in a pair of felt-soled slippers, is shut up in a cabinet or placed behind a screen, and the lights are turned down and out——" Adele broke off with a comic shrug of the shoulders. "Bah! It ought not to deceive a child!"

Return of Suspicion

Celia sat with a face which WOULD grow red. She did not look, but none the less she was aware that Mme. Dauvray was gazing at her with a perplexed frown and some return of her suspicion showing in her eyes. Adele Tace was not content to leave the subject there.

"Perhaps," she said, with a smile, "Mlle. Celia dresses in that way for a seance?"

"Madame shall see to-night," Celia stammered, and Camille Dauvray rather sternly repeated her words.

"Yes, Adele shall see to-night. I myself will decide what you shall wear, Celia."

Adele Tace casually suggested the kind of dress which she would prefer.

"Something light in color with a train, something which will hiss and whisper if mademoiselle moves about the room—yes, and I think one of mademoiselle's big hats," she said. "We will have mademoiselle as modern as possible, so that, when the great ladies of the past appear in the coiffure of their day, we may be sure it is not Mlle. Celie who represents them."

"I will speak to Helene," said Mme. Dauvary, and Adele Tace was content.

There was a particular new dress of which she knew, and it was very desirable that Mlle. Celie should wear it to-night.

For one thing, if Celia wore it, it would help the theory that she had put it on because she expected that night a lover; for another, with that dress there went a pair of satin slippers which had just come home from a shoemaker at Aix, and which would leave upon soft mould precisely the same imprints as the gray suede shoes which the girl was wearing now.

Celia was not greatly disconcerted by Mme. Rossignol's precautions. She would have to be a little more careful, and Mme. de Montespan would be a little longer in responding to the call of Mme. Dauvray than most of the other dead ladies of the past had been. But that was all.

She was, however, really troubled in another way. All through dinner, at every word of the conversation, she had felt her reluctance towards this seance swelling into a positive disgust. More than once she had felt driven by some uncontrollable power to rise up at the table and cry to Adele:

"You are right! It IS trickery. There is no truth in it."

But she mastered herself. For opposite to her sat her patroness, her good friend, the woman who had saved her. The flush upon Mme. Dauvray's cheeks and the agitation of her manner warned Celia how much hung upon the success of this last seance. How much for both of them!

And in the fulness of that knowledge a great fear assailed her. She began to be afraid, so strong was her reluctance, that she would not bring her heart into the task.

"Suppose I failed to-night because I could not force myself to wish not to fail!" she thought, and she steeled herself against the thought. To-night she must not fail. For apart altogether from Mme. Dauvray's happiness, her own, it seemed, was at stake, too.

"It must be from my lips that Harry learns what I have been," she said to herself, and with the resolve she strengthened herself.

"I will wear what you please," she said, with a smile. "I only wish Mme. Rossignol to be satisfied."

"And I shall be," said Adele, "if——" She learned forward in anxiety. She had come to the real necessity of Helen Vauquier's plan. "If we abandon as quite laughable the cupboard door and the string across it; if, in a word, mademoiselle consents that we tie her hand and foot and fasten her securely in a chair. Such restraints are usual in the experiments of which I have read. Was there not a medium called Mlle. Cook who was secured in this way, and then remarkable things, which I could not believe, were supposed to have happened?"

"Certainly I permit it," said Celia, with indifference; and Mme. Dauvray cried enthusiastically:

"Ah, you should believe to-night in those wonderful things!"

The Wonder Girl the World Around

OF all the ways that Girls have found,
The sweetest way to spoon
Is just to make the World go round
And plan your honeymoon.

In dreams upon a golden way,
Your Wonder Girl and you.
Can go from here to Mandalay
'Twixt noon and half-past two.

Her dainty finger traces out
The path that Love has laid;
O'er giant words her soft lips pout,
But YOURS—if close—can aid.

From Northern snows to Southern
suns,
You march without mishap;
The course of true love never runs
More smooth than on a map.

You see, on shores of far Japan,
The orange blossoms blow;
You jump from Rome to Hindoostan,
From Ind to Mexico.

There's not a trip you do not try;
No place on which you frown,
Save one tabooed locality,
That's known as Reno town.

Oh, Wealth must wait and Fame must furl
Its flag 'neath Cupid's gaze,
When one may woo a Wonder Girl
On honeymoonlit ways!

YOU MONSTER, HAVE YOU NO MERCY YOU CUR!

Desmond is getting to be a pretty good boomerang thrower. He has been practising on Claude since yesterday, and a clever man can learn a lot in that length of time. But now he is tired of the sport and is preparing to make his last throw the one that is to put our brave hero out of business.

Just a few rods away from the spot where Desmond is conducting his target practise stands Bill the Bushranger. Bill is looking for ostriches, but he doesn't see any. So he decides to throw a boomerang at random into the bush and see what happens. The chances are a million to one that nothing happens at all.

But long shots have to win sometimes; otherwise nobody would play them. Bill's boomerang meets the one thrown by Desperate Desmond and stops its death dealing career. We know you wouldn't believe this if any one else told you, but you wouldn't doubt our word, would you? No, of course you wouldn't.

When the bushranger sees his boomerang come back carrying another with it, he becomes suspicious. Nothing like that has ever happened to him before, although he has been throwing boomerangs for twenty years. He decides to investigate and find out the cause of this remarkable phenomenon.

As soon as Bill sees Claude bound to a post he knows there is villainy afoot, and when he gets a flash at Desmond's stovepipe hat and cigarette he knows him for the villain he is. Isn't it funny that villains always give the game away by togging themselves out so that anybody will know what they are?

While the bushranger is unbinding Claude, Desmond grabs Rosamond and beats it. Bill and Claude give chase, but the villain foils them by plunging into a swamp. They will have a hard time finding him in there. Not only that, but Desmond may have some trouble finding his way out. We'll see him again in Monday's pictures.

Forecast

Dearest, when you have grown
And all your charms have merged in one supreme,
Shall I not feel alone,
As if I loved a dream?

Your wilful sunlit hair,
Then gathered crownlike on your open brow;
Your brown hands then so fair,
That hold my heartstrings now.

Your eyes that thrill me through,
Your grace untamed, so short a while my own;
Dearest, what shall I do
For love, when you have grown?

A Wise Man

A COUPLE of Kansas men was talking of fearlessness the other day.

"All this talk," said one of them, "reminds me of a peace officer I knew a number of years ago in Western Kansas. This officer was entirely fearless! in fact, he was the kind of a chap who would have charged hell with a single bucket of water. To look down into the barrel of a gun in the other fellow's hand was as placidly accepted an affair for him as to light his pipe. He was sent for one day.

"'What's the matter?' he asked.

"'Cowboy in that room,' said a citizen, designating the place. 'He's wild and dangerous. He's locked himself in and we're afraid he'll break out and do us harm.'

"So this officer opened the door of the room and looked in. The cowboy had a six-shooter in one hand and a stick of dynamite in the other, and calmly remarked that he would turn them both loose in case the officer came into the room.

"The officer considered the thing for a minute. Then he backed away and as he did so remarked: 'Let him sleep it off. They is times when a man who ain't afraid is a d—n fool.'"

The House With No Address

A Story of Love and Tragedy, by E. Nesbit. Copyright by Doubleday, Page and Company

Synopsis of Previous Instalments

Edmund Templar, the young scion of a rich English family, is bound for the Boer war. He pays a visit to his uncle and aunt to say farewell, and in the forest, near their home, sees a young girl dancing in bare feet to the strains of a penny whistle. Her piping Pan is a crippled boy, like herself in the teens.

The girl, Alexandra Mundy, the granddaughter of a very rich tallow maker, discovers his presence and calls to Templar to come from hiding. She forces young Pan to cover his eyes. She tells Templar's fortune, after imposing a silence on him, and predicts that he will meet with great danger through the love of a woman.

"Your hand," she says, "tells me it has something to do with a head."

Templar returns, eight years later, from the war, to learn that Sandra's grandfather had failed and died, and that the girl and crippled boy had disappeared with their governess. From his relatives, Templar learned that Sandra's father had married an actress. Both parents had died when she was young and she was left free to run about as she pleased in the forest.

Templar's uncle tells him a bit of gossip, viz.: that a music master, "who had a black face like a wet retriever," had seen Sandra dancing one day in the woods and had accompanied her, after that, on long sylvan rambles. Old man Mundy raced home from Vienna in time to head off an elopement. The girl was taken back and the man sent away, after receiving a money consideration from the grandfather.

No one knew where the girl was hidden now, and the crippled boy likewise was missing.

Going back to London, Templar finds the metropolis wild over the dancing of a marvellous woman, who keeps her identity a secret. She is known only as Sylvia, and no one has been able even to interview her. Templar sees her dance at the Hilarity, and discovers she is Sandra, grown to glorious womanhood. It is the same wildwood nymph dance he had seen in the forest, and the young Pan who piped for her is Dennis, the crippled boy, now becoming famous as a musician. Templar keeps her secret, but learns from his friends that she is showered nightly with costly presents, all of which she retains, but refuses to see any of the donors.

Templar makes his way to the stage door, after the dance, and sees Sylvia, Denny and a woman, evidently the old governess, enter a motor car and drive off. He resolves to play detective and learn where Sylvia lives. Sylvia, Denny and Aunt Dusa, the governess, live in a house, which no one has been able to locate—"the house with no address."

"THE beastly show? Playing for me?"

"Playing for all these apes and goats and geese. There ought to have been some other way. There would have been some other way if I'd been like other men—if I hadn't been a crooked idiot that can do nothing for you except worship you. And worship's cheap nowadays, isn't it, Princess?"

"Not real—whatever you call it. That's not cheap. And you've got your music."

"Oh, it's a sweet destiny," he said grimly. "To feel inside you that you could conquer the world. And to have a body that will only let you play the flute and the fiddle and live on charity."

"There's your symphony," she said.

"I'm sick of my symphony," he said. "I shall never do any good with it. And if I do, nobody will want to hear it. And if they want to hear it, they won't pay me for it. Not till I'm dead anyway. And I'm alive now—alive all over—and all those people's eyes on you every night."

"There are worse ways of earning a living than mine, Den—suppose I had to sew rabbit skins for fourteen hours a day, and die of consumption? Or get phossy jaw, making matches? Or have my pretty teeth drop out, and my nails drop off, with lead poisoning at the potteries?"

He refused to consider these alternatives. "You ought," he said, "to be in a glass case, and no one allowed inside except the people who love you—the people at home. If I'd only been straight I could have done something really amusing and profitable for you—cut purses on the highroad—or gone in for the burgling—or been a company-promoter. As it is"——

The Writing of a Symphony

"As it is you're writing the symphony of the century; and you play like no one else in the world. I've told you a thousand times that I couldn't dance to any playing but yours."

"Take care," he said, smiling, "that's dangerous. If you tell me these things, one of these days I shall cut my hand off, so that you can't ever dance any more." He laughed. "And, talking of cutting—sometimes I'm like the old Roman Johnny. I wish that your audience had only one throat so I might cut it. I'm like a bear with a sore head to-night, Princess. I'm sorry. There was another of them in the stalls to-night. A real one. He went out after the Forest Dance. I suppose he couldn't stand the Salome. I expect he thought it was like all the others."

"Don't," she said, and getting up came behind him and touched his hair lightly, "don't you begin. You know I hate the Salome, too. It's not so easy for me, either. You know I have to ask for two things from you Den—courage and music——"

"And love——. That doesn't count?"

"Oh," she said lightly, "that doesn't count. I don't have to ask for that, do I? But sometimes—you think I'm as hard as nails, don't you? Sometimes I'm as weak as a kitten; it only needs a strong push to make me chuck dancing—to send me toppling over the edge into the hopeless hell where the typewriters and shop girls live. Don't push me over, Den."

"It isn't hell to them," said the young man. "Sometimes I wonder"——

An electric bell thrilled. I went to the door and opened it. A man, large and Jewish, in a fur coat and crush hat, stood in the doorway.

"Well, well, my pretty pigeon," he stood there and said, "and how goes the nest? More gold and silver linings, eh? More little stones for Uncle Moses to turn into downy feathers and straws and sticks in the building so useful, eh—eh?"

Enter "the Lion"

With that he took off his hat and, having bowed very deliberately and profoundly, shut it up with a bang, put it under his arm and entered the room on feet noiseless as a cat's, closing the door behind him as an accomplished nurse closes the door of a sick room. He came forward rubbing his hands.

"You're late, uncle, aren't you?" she said.

"Better late than never, my dear," he answered. "I stay a little to hear the world clap its hands and say, 'Who is Sylvia?' as Schubert in his song. Or Shakespeare to be just. And now—how many little fishes in Sylvia's pretty net?"

"There's the whole silly lot!" said the girl, pointing to the table.

The Jew stood by it, leaning lightly on the points of his podgy fingers, his little eyes bright, mobile, keenly appraising.

"Good—very good. 'Lord, what fools these mortals be'! I would not have believed it. No—never would I it have believed. All this for nothing, nothing, nothing!"

"It isn't nothing," said Denis.

"Eh?" said the Jew.

"It's the chance of thinking that perhaps they're not giving it for nothing," he said very low, picked up his crutch and limped away. The crutch made dots of sound in a dejected silence.

"Encouraged, my girl?" said the Jew.

"No," said Sylvia, "but"——

"They tell you you do wrong? I know. This fool boy who adores you—Oh, I think only of him for it the better. Or my sister-in-law—she thinks it not quite nice, eh? Pah! What know they? Of the world what know they?" He snapped his fingers. 'Not that. So hear what they say, and give it that of value. But me, old Moses, who knows the world, I say you are right. I say you do well. You are a brave maiden, like Deborah—like Miriam. Spoil the Egyptians, my maiden—Spoil the Egyptians! Take all and give nothing. Take from these that only wish you ill, and presently you shall give to those who need it. Thus says old Moses to you. And he knows"——

"Yes," said the girl, but her tone was flat.

"Courage, courage, courage," he went on, "de l'aurace et de l'audace, et puis encore de l'audace. Never a girl has had the courage of you—never a girl has had the luck of you. The Fates are for you. I am myself one who can read the stars, my child, and I say to you, 'All goes well if you love not.'

"Fall Not in Love"

"Once you love, the misfortune begins to remember you. Earnest-working to one end that is not the love-goal you pass unnoticed in your workdress. But if you shall put on the red love-roses then Fate say: 'Ha, ha! here is a beautiful one that I have overlooked,' and straightway down come the thumb—so!"

He ended a semi-circular movement of widespread fingers by the planting of a thumb heavily downward on the table.

"I'm not likely to have anything to do with that sort of silliness," the girl said, rather bitterly. "For one thing, I never see any one."

"Ah, and that is so good," said the German simply. "Keep so, my child. Keep so. And now, business. The emeralds I myself send—to encourage the others. The jewellers, they tell these things. And I like it to keep to look at. It is old, and good. See here is the bill. For the rest—the pearls are good—also the opals. It will be three hundred at the least, my pigeon. Now I go to make the inventory. You write? Good! so!"

To be continued Monday.

Which Shall She Marry?

Readers Aid "M. E. B.," Who Is Tempted Between Love and Riches

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"WHAT shall I do?" was the question asked by "M. E. B."

"I work hard to support my mother and sisters. Two men are in love with me.

"I love 'A.,' but it will be seven years before he can support a wife.

"'B.' I respect; he is good and kind and could marry me at once, thus taking the responsibility off my shoulders and helping me with the care of my mother and sisters. Will you help me to decide?"

"M. E. B.'s" question was such a difficult one to answer that I called on my friends for help in answering her.

What Three Girls Say

"They have responded nobly. Here are some of their answers. From three young women who work in the same office come the following three answers:

"If I were in her place I would marry Mr. B. If she admires him now she will grow to care for him.

"Long engagements as a rule do not turn out well. During a wait of seven or eight years the man in the case may grow tired of her.

"She will not be getting younger, and the cares and worries of both business and home will leave their mark behind. He will see some younger person whose beauty is still young and fresh, and forgetting all about his engagement, marry her. In this event M. E. B. will be left without either man.

"In marrying Mr. B. she will be relieved of the necessity of supporting her mother and sisters, and she will be in a position to aid her sisters to better marriages. M. A. M."

The following advice is practical in spite of the fact that the writer believes love to be the most important of all things:

"No doubt, love is the keystone of our future, but continued work and worry may have some effect on this foundation, and if, after toiling for the next seven or eight years, you marry this young man you really love, and his income is not sufficient to give you all this world's gratifications, do you not think the mere recollection of having an opportunity of having all this at a time long past would, in a slight degree, mar this true love?

"My advice is to accept the golden chance now offered. B. A. C."

Will Be a Faithful Wife

This girl believes that happiness will eventually be the reward of every sacrifice that "M. E. B." may make in marrying Mr. "B."

"M. E. B. may marry the wealthy man, have a good home and be able to take care of her mother and younger sisters in comfort. She may often have vain regrets of Mr. A., but it must be a great satisfaction to any young girl to know that she has done the right thing by her mother, who has done a great deal for her.

"Is it not possible that Mr. A., after six or seven years, may become fond of another pretty face or a more youthful figure? What, then, would become of M. E. B.?

"If M. E. B. respects and admires Mr. B., and he will do the right thing by her, there is no doubt but she will appreciate his little kindnesses and make him a good, loyal and faithful wife. R. E. M."

"Wait," Says This Woman

This writer decides in favor of true love and Mr. A.:

"I would advise her by all means to marry Mr. A., the man she loves. M. E. B. is but another example of the countless thousands of our sex who are tempted away from the path of true happiness by a soft living.

"Seven years! Wait seven times seven if need be—true love is eternal.

"MRS. L. PORTER."

This letter, needless to say, is from a man:

"She should wed the man with money for the specific reason that, being a woman, if she marries the one she will be sure to wish she had taken the other, and the material benefits she receives from marrying the rich man overbears the love which is a thing of the imagination.

"Wait awhile," says M. Stern; but the question is, will "M. E. B." take the same view?

"She should wait and work about four years, and then, if she still loves A. very dearly, as compared with B., she should marry A. Reasons: First, it is more important to love than to be loved; second, by the time she is twenty-five she will know and feel more decidedly how to choose."

I Knew You Mine

THE daffodil in its kirtle green
Entranced me with its grace,
The morn was fresh with the kiss of Spring,
The sun lay on everything,
The birds were learning anew to sing—
'Twas then I saw your face.

The wild white rose in its wilful way
With leaves played hide and seek,
A little bell rang out from the hill,
A clear low song sang the leaping rill,
The birds were glad with flourish and trill—
'Twas then I heard you speak.

The silver night had folded the world
In beauty all divine,
A white robe hung on the cliff once bare,
A murmur came on the soft night air,
A sound as soft as a whisper'd prayer—
'Twas then I knew you mine.

Electric Oddities

A NOVELTY that will appeal especially to the motorist and the physician is a pencil with an electric light in it. This illuminates a sheet of paper, and one can write with ease in the darkness.

Illuminated walking sticks are also attracting favor, and a distinguished gentleman, commenting upon the ingenuity of these new inventions, remarked that the man who would jump instantly into fame and the hearts of his fellow men would be the individual who could invent a hook and eye that carried a tiny electric light to guide the stumbling fingers of distressed husbands struggling with the intricacies of a wife's gown.

A PAGE OF HAREM GOWNS—Something that will appeal to everybody. Don't miss this feature of the Sunday AMERICAN.

NATURE'S WAY AND OURS

HOW to keep the fragrance and flavor in tea-leaves?

That was Nature's problem and ours.

She solved her part of the problem by sealing up the leaf in a tiny wisp.

Ours was the more difficult task of getting the fresh, uncrushed leaves to you. We solved our problem by filling the canisters from the bottom, instead of through the narrow neck, to avoid crushing, and by double-sealing the top with air-tight parchment.

Hence the morning-fresh flavor of your tea—if you use Chase and Sanborn's.

CHASE & SANBORN'S
TEAS

SEES FOSS AND FITZ WORD RACE

The New York Sun to-day publishes a letter from a Boston man signing the initials E. F. B. in which interesting comparisons are made between John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor, and Eugene N. Foss, Governor.

The letter follows:

For all around activity just now it looks a dead heat between Governor Foss and Fitz, for both seem able to make a speech on any subject at any time; but Fitz is, I think, a little more at ease on the platform, having had more experience than the Governor.

The Governor is of course a new man in politics, and if they do not hang a can on him this coming Fall he may improve and overtake the Mayor, who is now considerably in the lead, because it is said he has made a speech from about every stage and platform in the State.

Last night at Faneuil Hall while an able lawyer of this Commonwealth was giving an illustrated talk on Boston, who sent in word that he wanted to speak but Fitz! And he certainly did unseit.

He tore the big banking firms of Boston up the back for not floating $1,000,000 in bonds to establish a Texas-Boston steamship line; perhaps he will in a later speech tell us why it is "vital" to this city; he was too pressed for time last night.

I do not know just where the Governor talks to-night, but both he and the Mayor come together at South Boston to-morrow, and no doubt we shall learn more of the British evacuation; and it is sincerely to be hoped they will touch on the birthplace of St. Patrick, because if they warm up to that subject it will be settled for keeps.

Big doings are planned by the New England Fat Men's Club at their mid-Summer outing in Boston, June 22-25. Final details were arranged at a meeting of the Boston committee of arrangements. The June meeting will be an important one in the history of the club. Its incorporation will be discussed and a sick and death benefit for members will also be considered. Fun aplenty is also planned. A feature will be a friendly bout between Jackson of Brockton, 535 pounds, and Moulton of Portland, who tips the scales at 476 pounds.

ROSAMOND ALLEN, WHO IS BETROTHED TO MONTREAL MAN

ROSAMOND ALLEN EASTER BRIDE

Miss Rosamond Allen, the clever daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Newton Allen of Beacon street, is being deluged with flowers and felicitations since the announcement of her engagement to David J. Evans of Montreal. Miss Allen, who is exceedingly popular in her exclusive coterie, is a member of the Vincent Club, usually taking part in the drill each year at the show, which calls for the tallest girls of the club, and is likewise a member of the new and exclusive Chilton Club.

Miss Allen for some time has been prominent in L'Alliance Francaise, in which organization she was formerly secretary. She is tall and slender, of medium coloring and an attractive and interesting face. She is an expert horsewoman and is prominent among the skating enthusiasts of her set. The wedding, it is said, will be an event of the Easter season.

DEWEY DENIES HE ATTACKED JAPAN

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Admiral Dewey denies statements in a published interview with Count Ernest von Reveltlow, the German strategist, that he had urged an attack on Japan. Admiral Dewey says he never made such a statement and adds: "Furthermore, my views are and always have been just the opposite. It has been my aim ever since I assumed command of our Asiatic fleet, in 1898, to cultivate a friendly feeling between our country and Japan."

READVILLE GETS AUTO RACE DATE

By J. C. KERRISON.

July 8th is the date which has been assigned by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association to the Bay State Automobile Association for the holding of a race meet at Readville. This meet, if held, will form a portion of the National Racing Circuit and will bring to Boston the best cars and the best drivers in the country.

The local association has not officially made a statement as to what it proposes to do in the racing way, and this news comes to the writer through a source that has no connection whatever with the Bay State. It is to be presumed that having access to such a field of contestants, as would be possible on this date, the association will not hesitate to go ahead and make arrangements for giving to New Englanders what should prove to be the best motor racing tournament that has ever been held here.

Chairman Harry W. Knights of the Club Contest Board and likewise a member of the Executive Committee of the A. A. A. Contest Board, will have charge of the meet if one should be determined upon, which means that the arrangements will be of the very highest order.

Even though the motor show is only a week old, many of the motor truck men of Boston are already considering the date for the holding of the truck show a year hence. It is generally understood that next year there will be two shows held in Boston—one devoted entirely to commercial vehicles and the other to pleasure cars.

In speaking of this yesterday, Alvan T. Fuller expressed the opinion that in order to get the best results the commercial truck show should be held in January, preceding the New York exhibit. It would come so far ahead as not to interfere with the pleasure car exhibit. His idea is that in having two shows, one following close upon the other, one would, necessarily, detract from the other, even though they represent two separate and distinct branches of the industry.

This is a matter which will, unquestionably, receive careful consideration at the hands of the men and firms interested, and is one that will not be slighted in the least degree.

* * *

The Sturtevant Blower Company of Jamaica Plain, yesterday, placed its order with the J. W. Maguire Company for a three-ton Pierce Truck, which, by the way, is the only worm-drive truck in the country, and which attracted such great and general attention at the recent shows in New York, Chicago and Boston.

GIRL WINS HOOK NIGHT AWARD

There was a new bunch of raw recruits at the amateur night performance at the Columbia Theatre, and they had the hay-foot-straw-foot brigade beaten to a frazzle, furnishing unlimited fun to the large St. Patrick's night crowd. Fine discrimination was shown in the popular selection of the prize-winners, as Sophie Bennett, with her medley of topical songs, was by far the best on the bill, while the Hoyle trio of acrobats deserved all the applause they received with their second prize.

MISS WHITTIER BURIED TO-DAY

The funeral of Florence E. Whittier, the Ipswich girl, whose body was found in the Charles River Wednesday, was held to-day from the home of her father, Maynard Whittier, at Ipswich.

The Rev. T. Frank Waters, formerly pastor of the South Congregational Church, which Miss Whittier attended, conducted the services. The services were private. Fred Whittier, a brother, came from Detroit for the service.

NEW CHIEF AT THE NAVY YARD

Captain De Witt Coffman is now in command of the Charlestown Navy Yard. The ceremony was an assembly of the officers of yard, ships and station at the commandant's office and a parade by the marine guard and band. No salute was fired as Captain Coffin is not a flag officer. He has been in command of the battleship New Jersey, and his pennant was transferred from that ship to the receiving ship Wabash.

BROWN FAILS TO GET BAIL

Robert S. Brown, the State street broker, accused of forging the name of George Otis Draper, is in the Charles Street Jail to-day, while his friends are trying to raise $5,000 bail, the amount fixed for his release pending trial here. Brown was brought to Boston from New York yesterday, after having waived a demand for extradition proceedings. He expected that friends would be ready with bail, but after waiting for an hour in vain he was taken to a cell.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS CLOSE WITH RALLY

STATE STREET, March 18.—Closing—short covering by those who sold stocks in expectation that the Gould controversy would cause a further break in prices, caused a sharp raly during the last half hour's trading and gavea firm tone to the market.

Issues which have bene freely offered and borrowed in the loan crowd of late showed the most buoyancy. Steel, Central, Reading, Amalgamated and Tennessee copper were well amongst the leaders in the rally with gains of nearly a point, while Consolidated Gas and Union advanced 1¼. Missouri Pacific which had been sold down nearly two points in hopes of causing general liquidation closed at Friday's closing price.

The fact that the Goulds, though now well supplied with money through the sale of Western Union, will not attempt to fight the Rockefeller interest because they cannot expect any public following has seemed to dawn upon the bears. On the local board prices were firm at the close, but no inherent strength was shown.

There has been considerable switching between stockholders of Giroux and Greene-Cananea with both stocks selling around $6. A broker siys: "Speaking of comparisons of mining share prices, a selling price of $363 for Tamarack in 1902, when it was regarded as a stock for widows and orphans, and a recent selling price of $40, on the eve of its going into the Calumet & Hecla, is hard to beat in the records of the Boston Stock Exchange."

The proposed reduction in the American Woolen Company's common stock was not a stimulating factor in the price of the stock.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

New cauliflowers have made their appearance in the Northern markets. They are grown in Florida and a head the size of a man's fist sells for 35 cents.

Southern asparagus was late coming into the Boston market this year, but it is coming with a rush at present. Two weeks ago small bunches of thin stalks sold for $1.50 a bunch, and there was very little to be had at any price. At present there is a good supply of fine plump stalks, which sell for 75 cents a bunch.

Strawberries are quite plentiful and are selling for 40 cents a box. The quality of berries now offered by dealers is superior to the early berries of former seasons, and large quantities are being disposed of at the present prices.

South African peaches have supplanted European hot house peaches in the American market this year. In the past the only peaches obtainable at this season of the year were grown in hot houses, principally in Belgium, and sent here packed in cotton batting. They sold at $12 to $25 a dozen. At present fine large peaches from South Africa sell for about $2.25 to $2.50 per dozen. They are shipped to Liverpool on swift liners from Natal and Durban and reshipped from Liverpool to American ports on ocean greyhounds, arriving here in very good condition.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON, MARCH 18, 1911

BOSTON AMERICAN
80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 18, 1911

WAKE UP, BOSTON! Citizens and the Municipality Should Spend $50,000,000 a Year for the Next Five Years!

Is it not time that Boston began to ACT—TO DO SOMETHING?

There has been an endless amount of talk—TALK, TALK, TALK—for years. Is there ever going to be any ACTION? Are the people of Boston ever going to do any of the things that they ought to do to make this a great city?

Boston should spend $50,000,000 a year for the next five years, in public and private capital, in widening streets, in repaving streets, in subways, in a modern street car system, in new office structures, in new hotels, in docks and in a thousand other ways that a modern city should spend money to make the city grow and keep pace with civilization.

The men who are building the new Copley-Plaza Hotel are doing more for Boston than all the hot air orators in town.

Mr. E. D. Jordan has erected a great opera house, but he did it without much preliminary talk. He went ahead and built it, just as any other sane business man would do who had a sense of civic pride.

Other men are working along the lines of progress, but they work slowly.

In population Boston is the TENTH CITY IN THE WORLD. Real Boston is the FOURTH CITY in America. No other American cities approach us in size save New York, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Boston is the second centre of population in the United States. She has the greatest per-capita wealth in America. She has a good harbor. She is two hundred miles nearer the trade routes to Europe than New York. She is the harbor of the greatest manufacturing community in America. She is the natural Winter port of Canada.

Boston has one of the largest libraries in the world and one of the most famous universities. She has beautiful suburbs. She has a great history and an intelligent people.

BUT Boston does not obtain from these extraordinary advantages the commercial supremacy which they ought to give her.

Other cities with less resources have increased in commercial enterprise faster than Boston. Why?

Many reasons have been assigned, but few remedies have been suggested until recently. The principal cause probably lies in the habits of the natural leaders of our business enterprises.

Old fashioned, UNPROGRESSIVE methods have permitted Boston to lean upon its oars content with the momentum gathered from the exertions of the past.

In the West, in the South and in New York everything which might contribute to the commercial supremacy of their city is seized upon by the citizens.

But the failure of the natural business leaders of Boston to lead, no longer contributes to the backwardness of our commercial progress.

OUR BUSINESS LEADERS ARE NOW LEADING THE WAY TO A GREATER AND BETTER CITY. Consummate business minds like Mr. E. A. Filene's have been applied to the task of recovering Boston's commercial prestige.

The program recently announced by the gentlemen in charge of the 1915 movement indicates that these far-seeing and public-spirited citizens appreciate that commerce without health or happiness is not to the best purpose. Their attempts which are calculated to bring better health to a community, give the people better homes and to bring within their means the enjoyment of the arts, is no insignificant effort.

It has also come to be appreciated among the business men of Boston that the GROWTH of a city has many features akin to the growth of any business enterprise.

It cannot be left to take care of itself and keep pace with the progress of rival cities whose business leaders are pushing them with energy. No one would think that a great department store left to run itself without advertising and without every conceivable improvement to facilitate the ease and pleasure of customers could keep abreast of a department store which pushed its business, advertising its wares and drawing new purchasers to its counter by every possible means.

A commercial city is like a great department store. The business men of Boston can no more expect the full measure of commercial progress without the full measure of transportation facilities, than a department store can expect the best results from poor elevator service and bad stairs, and it is as ABSURD TO SAY THAT BOSTON OUGHT TO WAIT for the coming of new business before affording means which will attract that business, as it would be for the proprietor of a department store to say that he will not improve his store until he gets the customers whose business will pay for the improvements.

We need a greater development of our dock facilities. New York has overrun her limits and the greatest ocean steamers which cannot now find comfortable berths in New York ought to be brought to Boston.

This development of the docks is being hindered by the provision of law which requires the Harbor and Land Commissioners first to find a customer for the new docks, before it begins to spend the $3,000,000 which the State has appropriated for the development of the East Boston docks.

The limitation ought to be removed and the Harbor and Land Commissioners should proceed at once upon the work of the development. Both the gentlemen of the 1915 movement and the Chamber of Commerce appreciate the importance of time in the development of our dock system. They are right when they say it ought to BEGIN NOW.

One important relief not yet recommended by either the Chamber of Commerce or the 1915 Committee is a reform in the method of taxing real estate of Boston.

Something must be done to remove the Dead Hand from the throat of Enterprise. The enormous value of land in our congested business districts which goes from year to year without improvement should be so taxed that its owners will be compelled to utilize it or to give it up to some one who will utilize it. These immense values are created entirely by the activity of the whole community and they measure with remarkable accuracy the public need for the use of that land, and it is wrong to permit it to be profitable for the owners to continue little tumbled-down old buildings upon such land by a stupid system of assessments.

Mayor Fitzgerald, who has seen the evil of this real estate practice, ought to do what he can through his Board of Assessors to correct it. The assessors can do little, but they CAN DO MORE THAN THEY ARE DOING, and that will be an effort in the right direction.

Old, tumbled-down, rickety buildings should be condemned and torn down.

Streets should be widened. The old fossilized brick pavements should be replaced with concrete or flagging.

The archaic overhead trolleys should be taken down.

The disgraceful ramshackle trolley cars, filthy and disease-breeding, should be sent to the scrap heap.

The old hotels in the down-town district that are violating every law should make way for new modern structures.

A comprehensive subway system should be begun.

The Girl With the Little Head—The Newest Ways of Doing the Hair Are Illustrated in the Sunday AMERICAN

BOOKLAND

EDITED BY·EDWIN MARKHAM

EDWIN · MARKHAM

FOR a short time I have had my eye on Sharlot M. Hall, out on the crinkling Arizona desert. She is a poet as indigenous to the Far West as the bloom of the hardy chapparral. She spends no poetic fervor on the Grecian deities that Edith Thomas loves, nor on the Hebrew past that Anna Branch loves. She finds her inspiration in the lives and legends of our Western lands, and especially in the desert to which Mary Austin, too, has given a noble fealty.

The shepherd, the ranger, the prospector, the stage driver—these are her heroes; and she celebrates with devotion the mesquite, the cactus, the yucca and other strange plants of the sands. Her book of poems, "Cactus and the Pine," is full of the feel of the Far West, its glamour, its vastness and its valors. Every one will note the fervor of her spirit and the freshness of her attack.

She catches up many stories of the old adventurous days, in poems that will be a part of our Ballads of the Border collection in the days that are coming. Some of her dialect poems would have been famous in an earlier and roomier day—"Monte Bill," for one.

I quote some passages from her touching poem, "The Little House of Mary," which describes an old deserted playhouse of a child, whose gravestone near it is marked, "Mary, aged seven."

Like scars long healed the weed-grown dumps where the miners plied their craft,
And the tuna drops its crimson fruit down the mouth of the caving shaft,
A broken shovel, a wornout pick—and down in the gulch below
A lean coyote homes her whelps where the stamps beat blow on blow.

Where the tent-camp took its careless way to the rocky canyon's brink,
The plumed quail leads her covey and the wild deer comes to drink;
But then the mule bells tinkled, and, proud of her rank and place,
The old white bell-mare took the lead, setting the train its pace.

And here are her guarded treasures, quaint little shapes of clay,
Fashioned by small brown fingers as she sang at her lonely play—
But the dust lies thick upon them, and sand drifts bar the door,
And only a swift green lizard shimmers across the floor.

Like memories worn too deep to lose, the pack trail still winds down,
Out past the old gray bowlder and the ledges seamed and brown;
Till here it swerves a hand-width back, where once the rough cross stood,
With a child's brief name and a child's scant years carved in the sun-bleached wood.

The cross is fallen and crumbling, but still the wild quails call,
As if they missed a comrade through the sage brush thick and tall;
And where the love-vine tangles and the wind croons low at even,
The little playhouse waits for her, for "Mary, aged seven."

An Original Treatise on Universal Peace

When a president of a railroad can find time to write a book, the average man surely can find the time to read it. Arthur E. Stilwell, president of the Kansas City, Mexican & Orient railroad, has found time in his busy life to write "Universal Peace—War Is Mesmerism," a book which, as indicated by its title, deals with a noble subject dear to every human heart.

This is Dr. Stilwell's second contribution to the literature dealing with great present-day problems.

"Confidence or National Suicide,' his first book, met with a warm reception and was widely commented upon. "Universal Peace—War Is Mesmerism" is even more original in thought. It is unlike any other book on the subject of world peace, and is remarkable for its versatility.

The last chapter is the summing up of the book. "Look Up" is its message. Long before you are through with the initial chapter, you knew that looking up is the reality of life and the knowledge of it remains with you.

"Universal Peace—War Is Mesmerism," by Arthur E. Stilwell. The Bankers' Publishing Company, Boston and New York. $2.00.

Myths and Their Meanings

The field of mythology is fascinating to young and old, and "A Child's Guide to Mythology," by Helen Archibald Clarke, finds its welcome waiting. Miss Clarke is well known as an ardent student of literature, a woman learned in the history and significance of literary movements. She takes up the study of the myths in a large way. Her introduction and selection deal with myths from the comparative viewpoint accepted by the most recent scholarship.

She discusses the primitive myths, including those of the American Indians, and also the culture cycle with its many variants. She has chosen everywhere the most readable versions of the myths, taking care to select those emphasizing the primitive attitude of the minds which engendered the myths. There are illustrations.

Is This a New "Lorna Doone"?

"The Broad Highway," by Jeffery Farnol, is a sauntering, gossipy, arm-in-arm sort of story, in no haste to have done with its adventures.

One English critic says that it is "more fascinating and more human than 'Lorna Doone.'" I cannot, however, consent to this lofty appraisement. "The Broad Highway" has the movement, the charming out-of-door setting of the other novel; still Jeffery Farnol has not yet achieved the poignant realization of life and its deep import that characterizes the author of "Lorna Doone." I miss in "The Broad Highway" the penetrating use of words, the sudden smiting revelations of nature and of man that start from Blackmore's classic pages.

Yet this is not to say that Mr. Farnol has not written a book out of the usual, one with good character drawing and gracious spirit.

A Fairy Book

Many of the fairy books hardly call for notice, but one from the pen of Demetra Vaka is not to be slighted. The author of "Haremlik" cannot fail to pour over her lightest pages a more delicate wash than helped to make the reputation of the old Italian artists.

The children will read this dainty volume, while older folk will, under one pretense or another, snatch a passage, here and there, over their shoulders.

Books and Bookmen

The publication of books in Russia last year reached a total of 29,057 volumes, nearly equal to that of Germany, and almost three times the number published in either England or the United States. It must be said, however, that the bulk of the Russian publications is made up of detective stories and the most shady class of French novels.

Maurice Maeterlinck has had to give up the use of tobacco, which he used in prodigious quantities when writing. But he has managed to retain his beloved pipe, the bowl of which he fills with a denicotined preparation, tasteless, but harmless. And now, as of yore, his pipe is alight when his pen is at work, and clouds of smoke envelope him, shutting out the world and shutting him in with his fancies and imaginings.

Gilbert K. Chesterton devotes one of his essays in his book, "Alarms and Discussions," to the fragrant and moving subject of "cheese."

"If all the trees were bread and cheese," he quotes, "there would be considerable deforestation round about where he lived," he says. As for crackers he abhors them, and claims bread, solidly, yielding bread, the only fit mate for solid yielding cheese.

In a short sketch of the late John Lockwood Kipling, father of the great author, published in the March Bookman, occurs the following anecdote:

Mr. Kipling and Rudyard, then a mischievous boy of irrepressible spirit, were making a long sea voyage together. One calm day, when the vessel was in mid-ocean, one of the ship's officers rushed into the men's smoking room with an agitated countenance. "Mr. Kipling," he said, "your son is hanging head downward from hte end of the bowsprit." "Indeed," was the calm reply. "But," continued the officer, "if he lets go he will be drowned." "Don't alarm yourself," said Mr. Kipling, "he won't let go."

A. C. Fox-Davies became a fiction writer because his legal training as a barrister forced him to reject the evidence which Sir Conan Doyle's "Sherlock Holmes" was continually deducing in that famous series. He wrote a sequel to one of those stories, in which the man accused of the crime by Sherlock Holmes was put on trial and acquitted on the detective's own facts. Mr. Fox-Davies sent the story to Sir Conan Doyle, who complimented the barrister on his work, and advised him to write a series of his own, following the same line. Instead of doing this, Mr. Fox-Davies wrote "The Mauleverer Murders" and "The Dangerfield Inheritance."

"Never again," says Louise Closser Hale, will she ever act or write about the stage. "The Married Miss Worth" is to be her last connection directly or indirectly with the life behind the scenes. She sails this month for Algiers, whence she will penetrate the desert as far as she can go in an automobile.

Albert Bigelow Paine, through his publishers, has given out the following letter from a twelve-year-old California boy, which he prizes greatly as a sincere tribute to his "Hollow Tree and Deep Woods Book" (Harpers).

"Dear Mr. Paine—I like your stories very much about the 'Coon and the 'Possum and the Old Black Crow. I read them to my little sister sometimes, and she enjoys them so much that whenever she sees the book she asks me to read to her from it. You said in the book that the very best pay that ever comes to one who writes a book is to know that the ones he wrote it for really like it, so I am going to write to you, because I like your book."
